. . . and Now to the UNIVERSITY

High School years have passed quickly. University days will soon be here. If you intend going to college next year, it's wise to get some of your books during the Summer.

The Book Department is owned and operated by the University for the college students of Winnipeg. All textbooks are sold at the very lowest possible prices. Manitoba students are most fortunate in this regard, for The Book Department has as its constant aim—The Lowest Prices in Canada.

Editorial

"To be or not to be, that is the question." Just as Hamlet pondered about his course of action, we have pondered about what steps to take in completing a yearbook. We must plan carefully because just as a man using a faulty weapon in battle is killed, so we are defeated in our purpose if our plan is defective.

Early in the year we asked ourselves Hamlet's question, but unlike Hamlet, however, decided that "Where there's a will, there's a way" and proceeded to gather our "weapons," and assemble our "army" to prepare for the "battle."

Our first area of attack was the Grad section. We experienced a feeling of elation as we emerged victorious from a flutter of pictures, paste, and write-ups, to converge on our next section. Our hope was turned to despair as we realized that our next "enemy" was stronger and more evasive. Our scouts managed to track down the various leaders (committee chairman) and persuaded them to yield their write-ups. Clubs were besieged and write-ups were wrenched from their grasps. Finally the Events section was overcome.

A false sense of security threatened to overcome us as we moved on to the Arts section, confident because our two major "battles" were behind us. We were confronted by an avalanche of essays, short stories, and poems, which we had to dig through to capture the best of the lot. (This task was hard because we found so many excellent choices).

Now truly overcome by our previous victories we pressed on towards our goal with eager steps only to find a last battle had to be fought. This we found was one of the hardest since our best athletes gathered to prevent us from succeeding. Valiantly we tried to wrest write-ups from their grasps. All seemed lost, but just as "hope springs from despair," and "the darkest hour is before the dawn," we saw victory emerge from what appeared certain defeat. There before us was our completed yearbook, a trophy for our struggles. Exhausted, we anxiously awaited students reaction to our "prize."

I would like to thank all my staff, my advisors, the art department, the photography section, and all the students who did their parts for the yearbook.

To the staff next year I wish the best of luck, and hope you don't take this "battle" story too much to heart.

—Jo-Ann Stefansson

Dedications

Miss Vida Craven

Miss Vida Craven, B.A., B.Ed., leaves Daniel this year after twenty-two years of inspired teaching in the English department. She has contributed much to the academic and cultural growth of the school both in the classroom and activities such as Breezes, opera, musical festival, Remembrance Day services, and graduation. Wherever her influence has been felt there has been added a touch of dignity and graciousness.

In recognition of her constant effort to instil high standards both in Literature and in life, the epithet "Mother Craven" has been attached to her with affectionate respect by generations of students. Like her colleagues, they are saddened by her present illness and wish her a speedy restoration of her customary vigour and "joie de vivre."

Miss Jerrard

A genuine, grade-A home-grown product, Miss Jerrard was born and educated in Winnipeg. At the University of Manitoba, where she obtained a Bachelor of Arts degree, her chief academic interest was science, and her chief extra-curricular interests, basketball and track and field.

During her first five years at Daniel McIntyre, she directed girls' physical education. Then she joined the biology department, took over guidance and counselling for girls, and became faculty advisor for the Student Council. Senior students will remember her as a wise and gentle guide and friend, with an ever-accessible and ever-understanding ear for their problems.

One of Miss Jerrard's favourite places is her lovely summer home on Lake Winnipeg. May she have health and strength to enjoy it for many years!

Miss Elspeth P. Wallace

Miss Wallace had the good fortune of being born in Scotland, and of spending her earliest years in that delectable country. On coming to Manitoba, she attended schools in Winnipeg and in Selkirk, where she was Governor-General's Medalist. Later she studied at the University of Manitoba.

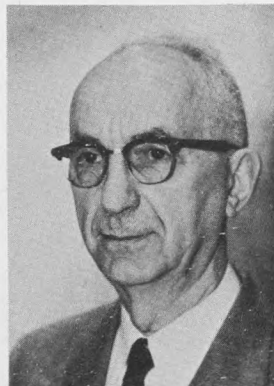

The Commercial Departments of Winnipeg schools have had the benefit of Miss Wallace's services for most of her teaching career.

Since her coming to Daniel McIntyre, "the desert has rejoiced and blossomed as the rose," for Miss Wallace has nurtured the luxuriant plants in the halls and office.

We are sorry that Miss Wallace is leaving us. The students will miss her excellent teaching, and everyone will miss one whose thoughtfulness and good humour have been unfailing.

Ad multos annos!

Mr. A. W. Hudson

Mr. Hudson, a native of Newfoundland, had completed training as a pilot in the R.A.F. by the end of World War 1. He came to D.M.C.I. in the thirties after a successful career as business college specialist in accountancy.

As teacher of senior bookkeeping and allied subjects here, his excellent instruction, beautiful penmanship and friendly interest in the progress of his pupils beyond their school days have been inspiring.

As teacher, basketball coach, school treasurer, etc., his generous contributions to our life have been balanced by a refreshing sense of humour. We shall greatly miss both his skills and his genial presence. We wish him and Mrs. Hudson many years of good health and happy travels together.

Principal's Message

Down through the ages, much has been said and written about happiness. There have been different understandings of it, different interpretations put upon it: man has yearned for it and eagerly sought after it. Regardless of the differences, many people who have enjoyed real happiness are agreed that it comes from within and not from without. It is not dependent on external things: it springs from inward thoughts and emotions. It is not to be found in what one does but in what one thinks.

A one-time President of Yale University said, "The happiest person is the person who thinks the most interesting thoughts." One of his students, William Lyon Phelps, who later became a noted writer, critic, lecturer, and professor in Yale, never forgot that statement. Throughout a long and successful career, that sentence stayed with him, helping to shape his life and his ambitions—helping to keep his sights and standards high. It came to mean more and more as time went on, and as he more fully realized its significance. When he came to the end of his career, he wrote; "No matter what may be one's nationality, sex, age, philosophy, or religion, everyone wishes either to become or to remain happy. How essential it is, then, in youth to acquire some intellectual or artistic tastes, in order to furnish the mind, to be able to live inside a mind with attractive and interesting pictures on the walls."

The students who are about to leave Daniel McIntyre, have had, during the past two or three year, many opportunities to sow the seeds of true happiness for themselves and those around them. An empty mind grows bored and cannot endure itself; an empty mind seeks pleasure as a substitute for happiness; an active and inquiring mind is the best insurance against boredom and discontent. My sincere wish to each of you at this time is that what you have experienced and learned here may lead to a rich and full life in which you find that happiness.

On behalf of the students and myself, I wish to express our appreciation of the many contributions made by members of the staff in the interest of the school during the past year. On behalf of the entire school, staff and students, may I congratulate and thank the many students who, through their efforts and co-operation added to Daniel McIntyre's fine traditions.

A. C. McMurchy

Vice-Principal's Message

Ophelia, in deep distress, utters these painful words:

"O, woe is me, To have seen what I have seen, see what I see."

There are times when these words become very meaningful to one who reflects on the actions of our students, the neglected opportunities and the setbacks to their academic growth. If youth but understood the lessons which seemingly can be learned only by experience, what a generation of giants would inhabit this terrestrial sphere! Galileos, Newtons, and Einsteins would be greatly reduced in stature in comparison with the moderns. With becoming modesty, such a generation could indeed leave to posterity the epitaph of Ozymandias:

"Look on my works, ye mighty, and despair."

But God in his wisdom "fulfills himself in many ways—lest one good custom should corrupt the world." Such a condition must not come to pass, must never be part of His plan. For if students became giants then their teachers would have to be "Super beings." What of the principals? A dreadful thought.

And so it seems "better to bear the ills we have than fly to others we know not of." It is better to have students remain students with their enthusiasm tempered by indifference, their zeal matched by their apathy, and their successes balanced by their failures. After some thought it is not really too discouraging to behold our students and "see what we see."

J. Silverberg.

President's Message

1959-60 marked the end of "Daniel's Fabulous Fifties," and the beginning of a new decade in the glorious history of our school. It was a year in which school spirit and extra curricular activities flourished.

A victory in the Red Feather Tournament showed the way and was followed by no less than six other sports championships. Our choirs again carried Daniel's colors to victory. With great pride we look to the students who won top honours at the Science Fair. A television program from the school auditorium and library presented an opportunity to others to catch a fleeting glance of our school life. A new system of elections was set up, whereby future presidents will be elected during the last term of the school year. It was a memorable year.

As the representative of the student body, I would like to express my sincere appreciation to our teachers for their efforts on our behalf, and to those students who have contributed to make this a successful year. In particular, I would like to thank our Student Council, our Executive, and our various committees for their assistance and co-operation. Also a special word of gratitude to Mr. McMurchy, Mrs. Witherspoon, Mr. Kemp, and all the other staff advisors for their helpful guidance.

For us, the senior graduates, this year marks the end of another chapter in the book of life and the beginning of a new one. Although we have journeyed together to the crossroads, we must now part ways, some to continue our education, while others turn immediately to chosen vocations. However, each of us will recognize the vital importance of our years at Daniel McIntyre, and realize that we are going into the world better equipped to serve our fellow man. May we continue to build on the foundation that we have acquired at our beloved Alma Mater.

Finally, to the returning students, may you hold high the traditions and ideals which have made Daniel great. Let everyone exhibit natural warmth and spirit to his fellow students. Let's keep Daniel McIntyre on top in every field—, exactly where she belongs.

Governor General's Medalists,

1958-59

JO-ANN STEFANSSON

It was with little surprise that we learned that Jo-Ann Stefansson of Room 48 was awarded the Governor General's Medal for 1958-59.

In Jo-Ann's three years at Daniel, her participation in extra-curricular activities and her high scholastic standing have proved her worthy of this honour.

Throughout Grade X Jo-Ann served as a member of the Awards Committee and was her room sports captain. She participated whole-heartedly in all inter-room sports, as well as in inter-high track. She contributed articles to the D.M.C. "Eye" and "Breezes," and as an added honour she was crowned Freshie Queen. The crowning point of her freshie year was a final average of eighty-two.

In Grade XI Jo-Ann was the assistant editor and sports editor of the "Breezes," as well as her room "Breezes" rep. She was a member of the choir and a staunch supporter of the Phoenix Club. Once again she took part in all inter-room sports and inter-high track. She kept her honour standing with an average of eighty-five, and in June she wrote for an Isbister scholarship. In the graduation ceremony she was chosen to pass the Grade XI emblem to the Grade X's. For her participation in these numerous activities, she received a Major "M" and a Citizenship Award.

In her final year at Daniel, Jo-Ann has served as the capable "Breezes" editor, room vice-president, and one of the two representatives on Eaton's Junior Council.

Her activities outside of school keep her just about as busy as those in school. She is a member of the Young People's Group, sings in the church choir, and also finds time to teach Sunday School.

Jo-Ann intends to enter the University of Manitoba. She plans to graduate as a social worker.

1959-60

RICHARD BOWER

The Governor-General's Medal, awarded annually to the student displaying the highest qualities of leadership and scholarship, was presented this year to Richard Bower of Room 49 for the term 1959-60.

Richard, during his two years at Daniel, has consistently displayed the important qualities of ability, initiative, and co-operation.

In Grade X he was "Eye" representative for his room. He also participated in inter-room sports, in his first year at Daniel, and at the end of the school year, he received the School Board Book Award for his exceptionally high average.

This past year Richard has been the able Features Editor of the "Eye". He was chosen to represent the Grade XI boys on the Social Committee, and to fill a similar position on the spring Elections Committee. He again participated in inter-room sports, and was one of the two representatives from Daniel at the annual High School Students' Conference on Human Relations.

Scholastically, Richard's record has been remarkable. He was a district winner in the Provincial Maths Contest sponsored by the University, the recipient of the merit award for history, and he received a School Board Book Award in Grade XI. Richard was also awarded the Chartered Accountants' Prize for scoring the highest marks in English and Mathematics in Grade XI.

Golf and music are two of Richard's main interests. He plans to take a Science Course at the University, and is at present considering entering the insurance business as an actuary. Our best wishes for success in the future go with him.

Staff Award

The staff Awards Committee in choosing a candidate for the Governor-General's Medal is frequently faced with a difficult choice between two students both of whom are regarded as worthy of this high honor. In the past the worthy "runner-up" received no formal recognition for his achievement. It was to remedy this that the Awards Committee recommended the establishment of a Staff Award.

This Staff Award will not necessarily be granted annually, but only when in the judgment of the Committee a choice has to be made between two students both of whom are considered of Governor General Medal calibre.

Helen Miller was the Committee's choice for the award in 1959. Helen's academic achievements are outstanding. Among these are the Honor Roll in Grades X and XI, the School Board Book Award for the same grades, and the English Merit Award for Grade XI. She was also a valuable member of the choir, the "Breezes," the Phoenix Club, and the Welfare Committee. The graduating classes in 1959 honored her by electing her as their valedictorian.

Helen has continued her good work throughout her senior year at Daniel. She is planning to enrol in a science course at the U. of Man. next term.

EATON'S

JUNIOR COUNCIL and JUNIOR EXECUTIVE

Skuli Sigfusson

Jo-Ann Stefansson

EATON'S of CANADA has been proud to have had Jo-Ann Stefansson and Skuli Sigfusson as Junior Council and Junior Executive representatives of Daniel McIntyre Collegiate this past year. Chosen on a basis of academic standing, personality and general participation in school activities Jo-Ann and Skuli have given EATON'S the fresh ideas, enthusiasm and alertness so typical of youth. They have helped us to keep in touch with the newest fashions, fads, desires and needs of Young Canada. In return, EATON'S has been very happy to give them practical training in modern retail business methods and merchandising . . . as well as actual selling experience.

ROOM 55 XIII

MISS WARWICK—Many thanks to a wonderful teacher for guiding us throughout the year.

CAROLE ALDOUS—This blue-eyed brunette is usually seen bouncing around the halls with Clara and Marion. "I have an ambition; I just don't know what it is."

PAT ANDERSON—Our likeable Grade XII Representative. Played Senior Volleyball until she injured her ankle. An H.B.C. employee. Plans on a nursing career.

VAL ANDERSON—"I only go out six nights a week." Cheerleader, swimming instructor, Sea Ranger. Likes: creampuffs, Tommy Hunter, and her pet thumbnail. Ambition: to cross the Arctic. Future: white cap.

SIGNY BRANDSON—Invents trouble with Bjorg. Exercises her arm on the squeak box. One of Daniel's better singers. Cheerful and happy—except in the morning.

ELLA COOK—Girls' Sport's Editor of the "Eye". Likes: sports, dancing, chips and gravy, and holidays. Ambition: physical education teacher, and to collect money people owe her.

BEV. CRABBE—What the well-dressed redhead should wear! "How I hate to leave these loving halls." She will??? "Why does my bowling ball keep rolling in the alley?"

LINDA DAINTON—Likes complaining. Devoted to her cat. Tolerates Maria. Sometimes Co-Editor of the Eye. Amateur star-gazer.

MARLENE DONAHUE—Sings alto in the choir. What would the Constitution Committee do without her?? Dislikes homework and red hair. Usually seen with Olga and Janice. Ambition: white cap.

MARION FAWCETT—Marion is the girl who gets a lot of "interest" from the bank. Ambition: to enlighten the minds of the future generation. Probable fate: black board washer.

JANET FREE—Oh! those beautiful brown eyes. Studies but has fun, wow! Spends her weekends working at Lob-laws. Plans a career in Home Economics.

AUDREY HEATHFIELD—"Maniac in a Mercury." Does her maths every morning at 8:45. Her likes include papaburgers, steaks at 2 a.m., and cars. Ambition: secretary.

ELAINE HEINICKE—Miss Confusion always tries to get higher marks than Linda. Interests: boys, sports, boys, dogs, boys, dancing. Tries to keep track of Marilyn's boyfriends.

MARLENE HOEL—A blonde blue-eyed Miss. Notorious in chem. lab.—gets 2000% error in experiments. Great talker, especially in maths; also a "Phoenix" member (it figures). Spends weekends at Eatons. Future: nurse.

CAROLE KICELUK—May be found at the "Y" every Thursday night with Cathy. Participates in all inter-room sports. Often seen driving a '53 Pontiac.

HELEN KILLEEN—A member of the lost generation. Room 55's "Eye Rep." Likes: cats, creampuffs, and big bulky sweaters. She dislikes fat people and salamanders.

This year the Eye Staff continued its efforts to give the students of Daniel a first class newspaper. At the beginning of the year, each student paid $1.00 for a year's subscription to the paper. An attempt was made to introduce more articles dealing with school activities. The staff also experimented with new publishing techniques. It was hoped that these changes would result in the production of a newspaper which would reflect more clearly the spirit of Daniel.

Committees

Awards Committee

Linda Hamerton, Ella Cook, Carole Worboys, Bob McWilliams, Pat Anderson, Dorothy Martin, Steve Yoshino.

The Awards Committee had several duties to perform this year. Early in February, the committee began to take orders for school rings and pins. Several recommendations were made to the Council by the Awards Committee concerning the citizenship awards. Towards the end of April, applications for various awards were accepted and checked. The committee enjoyed a successful year.

Chairman: Bob McWilliams

Constitution Committee

The function of this committee is to consider, and adopt, or reject, suggested changes and additions to the Constitution. The formation of several new clubs in the school this year gave the committee a considerable amount of work.

Chairman: Marlene Donahue

Akemi Miyahara, Marlene Donahue, Jack Yea, Judy Boychuck.

Elections Committee

Slavia Knysh, Skuli Sigfusson, Lesley Berthiaume, Warren Williams.

The Elections Committee is responsible for organizing student elections. This year three candidates ran for presidency, all Grade 12 students, and only one candidate, a Grade 11 student, stood for the position of vice-president. Owing to the effort and work done by this committee the elections were successful.

Chairman: Lesley Berthiaume

Committees

Publicity Committee

The members of the Publicity Committee have been hard at work all year. Among their achievements are posters for dances and other school activities, blackboard notices for sports events, scoreboards for the basketball games, ticket sales for the Variety Concert, table decorations for the co-ed dance, and decorations for the Graduation Dance.

Chairman: Dale Hunt

Roseanne Taylor, Lorne Cooper, Donna McNeill, Dale Hunt, Sandra McNeill, Dianne Sherritt, Maureen Horton.

Social Committee

The Social Committee organized five student dances during the school year. Our first dance, the Freshie Dance, proved a hit. In November a dance for our football team was received enthusiastically. After Christmas we had our third dance. This was followed by our annual, ever popular Co-ed Dance. The Graduation Dance, which concluded the year, was a huge success.

Chairman: Jack Weremy

Welfare Committee

This year, the Welfare Committee again supported the Junior Red Cross. Projects in support of this organization included volunteer nurses' aide work, the making of Christmas favours for General Hospital, checking coats, and selling drinks at school dances. The committee also supported the Blood Donor Drive in March, and held a coke dance just after Easter.

Chairman: Helen Miller

Sheila McGavin, Lynn Jarman, Helen Miller, Dorothy Bretson, Marion Dunning.

The Board of Athletics

After the members of the Board of Athletics were finally chosen this year, they proceeded to organize the Co-Ed Volleyball League. They also organized the Swimming Club, which meets each Tuesday at Sherbrooke Pool. The idea of a skating rink to be built for future Danielites was proposed and discussed by the Board. The committee also helped Mr. Murray write up the individual and team scores from the Senior Boys' Basketball League. The committee plans to help organize the track and field meets.

Breezes' Advertising Staff

The 1960 edition of the "Breezes" was, to a considerable degree, made financially possible through the voluntary efforts of this committee. The loss of 3:30 study periods, which in previous years were used in order to collect the advertisements, seemed no barrier to the members of this year's committee. Without the incentive of a "commission," the committee, under capable direction of Mr. White, worked successfully throughout the year.

Breezes' Typists

The yearbook typists, selected at the beginning of the school year, must be able to decipher all "styles" of handwriting, type scores of name lists, and maintain a cheerful attitude while doing these important but unexciting tasks. Early in the year they were snowed under with grads' write-ups, committee write-ups, sports' write-ups, etc., but managed to plow through successfully. Many thanks for a job well done.

Phoenix Club

Christine Gizewski, Tom McLaughlin, Evelyn Bond, Ingrid Ravatn, Jack Yea, Marlene Hoel.

The Phoenix Club began its second year early in the new school term as a current affairs club. President Ingrid Ravatn, and vice-president, Evelyn Bond, together with their executive, worked hard to get club activities started.

The club began the year's agenda the last week in September with a panel discussion on Mr. Krushchev's visit to the United States. Many members of the club expressed the view that Mr. Krushchev planned this visit as propaganda for the American citizens. Other members felt the visit was a sincere move toward friendly relations between Russia and the United States.

In October the club discussed the United Nations. The first meeting on this topic was a film entitled "Workshop for Peace." The following week Mrs. Jean Edmonds, freelance writer for the "Financial Post", spoke on Canada's role in the U.N. The final meeting of the month was the debate, "Resolved: That Red China should be admitted to the U.N." The decision went to the affirmative side.

The subject for study for November was Russia. For the first meeting club members saw a film on Russian agriculture and industry. The following week four students gave more details about agriculture, lumbering, mining, and industry in Russia and compared these occupations to similar occupations in Canada. At the last meeting before Christmas exams, Miss Florence gave an interesting summary of Isaac Deutcher's lecture about Russia.

A film titled "The St. Lawrence Seaway" served as an introduction to our topic for January — Canadian-American Relations. The next week a panel of four members discussed the attitude of the two countries toward one another. A highlight of the month was a debate on the topic "Resolved: That Canada should be annexed to the United States." No final decision was reached.

The topic chosen in February was the move for independence in South Africa. The first meeting of the month was a round table discussion about "Racial Tension in Kenya." This discussion examined the Negro right to vote. The following week the club saw a film entitled "South Africa, Land of Contrasts." The last meeting in February concerned itself with the business affairs of the club.

Because racial tolerance proved an interesting topic in previous years, it was again used as part of the program for March. The first meeting in March was an impromptu discussion and exchange of opinion on the statement—"Segregation of the Colored Races is Justified." The following week there was a round table discussion on the Indian and Metis problem in Manitoba. The final meeting before exams was a film about the Indian and Metis.

In April the club examined the functions of the provincial and federal government. The first meeting was a round table discussion on the activities of the federal government in Ottawa. The following week there was a film about provincial government.

In May there were several round table discussions on current affairs. Also in May, the executive for the following year was elected. Club activities were brought to a close to give the new executive time to prepare a tentative program for the coming year.

Our sincere thanks and appreciation to Mr. Fleck for his guidance in club activities.

Murray Hastings, Elke Von Harscher, Glenn Kletke, Bob Bealer, Maureen Scott, Don Hamilton.

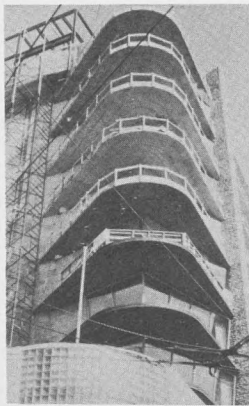

Under the guidance of Mr. Russell, the camera club was organized this year as an activity for the students of D.M.C.I. who were interested in photography. The following people were winners in the photography contest held this spring:

Grand Winner: Edward Lubick, Room 40

Animal .....	Gerald Miller, Room 42
People .....	Bob Bealer, Room 52
Scenery .....	Maureen Scott, Room 45
Mishaps .....	Glenn Kletke, Room 52

First: Scenes
"A Summer Evening"

Grand Winner:
"Progress"

First: People
"My Inspiration"

First: Animal
"Blackie"

First: Mishaps
"Fighting the Fire"

D.M.C.I. Science Clubs

Back: Ken Sparrow, Don Fidelak, David Challes, Mike Walsworth, Ed Sorba, Murray Hastings.

Front: Jack Harris, Reid Pearce, Mr. Lind, Henry Funk, John Unger.

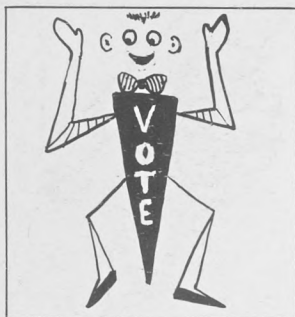

Two science clubs were organized in Daniel McIntyre this year. The first, under President Henry Funk, and supervised by Mr. Lind; the second, consisting of students from room 18, with President Agnes Westphall, was directed by Miss Newell. These clubs met regularly in Rooms 20 and 18 every noon hour.

The major project of each of the clubs was the preparation of entries for the Provincial Science Fair in April. A model demonstrating Newton's third law, by Mike Walsworth; a demonstration of the Avogadro Number estimation, by Ed Sorba; a collection of colored slides and recorded sound on the physics course, by Reid Pearce; an 8m.m. sound and colour movie of the experiments in the high school physics course, by Henry Funk; an electron locator, by Murray Hastings; and a model showing water in circulation, by the students of Room 18, were among the exhibits entered in the Fair.

The success of our entries exceeded our hopes. Ed Sorba's entry, with a score of 272 points, was judged the best entry in the Fair. This achievement won Ed a $100 scholarship donated by the Free Press, and a $50 prize given by the Rotary Club. Daniel McIntyre with 1845 points was awarded the trophy for the school with the highest aggregate point score in the Fair. This high point score was made possible by a second and third place in the Physics section by Henry Funk, and Reid Pearce respectively; and a first and third place in the Chemistry competition, by Ed Sorba and Murray Hastings.

Next year's club has been left with a record which will be difficult to equal. Our thanks to all the science teachers whose guidance and encouragement played no small part in our achievement.

September

Daniel's

Sept. 1—Another school year has begun. We are now on a six-day cycle, and each period is about ten minutes longer than previously. New staff members are Miss Smith, Miss Wiggins, Mrs. Witherspoon, Mr. Browning, Mr. Fleck, Mr. Harvey, Mr. Hjartason, Mr. McClymont, and Mr. White.

Sept. 17—Tonight, Red Feather Night, highlight of the football season, was held. Danielites did so well that they were awarded the well-deserved shield and crests.

Sept. 21—Henry Schroeder is our new President. Maureen Horton of Room 11 became Vice-President by acclamation.

Late Sept.—Mr. Jack Turner, renowned American sports car driver, spoke to D.M.C.I. students on safe driving. A short film, "Indianapolis Five Hundred Mile Race," was shown. A brief, but pointed talk followed the film.

October

Oct. 15—October "tests" start today. Under a new system, all exams, which are one and a quarter hours long, will be written in two days.

Oct. 19—This is "Beat Tec-Voc Day"—something new at Daniel. At the pep rally today, our president introduced a toque and scarf in Daniel colours. No doubt our banners helped to spur our team on to a 12-6 victory over Tec-Voc that night.

Oct. 23—The Freshie Dance was held in the evening after a fun-filled ?? day of hazing. Cute Brenda Molnar was chosen Freshie Queen. The Freshies, who were clad in jeans, shirts, hats, and runners, were hazed in activities directed from the stage, and some were even abducted and deposited at the C.N.R. Station.

November

Nov. 11—Guest speakers at this year's Remembrance Day Service included the Rev. J. Carl Ridd and Mr. H. C. Knox, a former teacher and vice-principal of Daniel. Phil Young played the Last Post.

Nov. 19—Tonight was Parents' Night. A large number of parents turned out to discuss the work of their fledglings with the teachers.

Nov. 27—A dance was held in honour of our fabulous football team. The name, the "Snooram Splash," ("Maroons" spelled backwards) was given to it. Decorations included a huge rugby ball on the curtain at the back of the stage, red and white streamers, and gaily coloured balloons.

December

Dec. 14—For the past few weeks students have been seen studying for the exams, which begin this morning. We who are about to die salute you! Still, there are the Christmas holidays to look forward to. Merry Christmas, and have fun in the holidays!

January

Jan. 19—This morning we, the student body, had the pleasure of hearing a short performance by the Winnipeg Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Victor Feldbrill, in our auditorium. In the group's second visit to Daniel, favorites such as "Greensleeves" and "Swan Lake" were played.

Jan. 22—This was "Kiddies' Day" at the University. Many of our Grade Eleven and Twelve students inspected the faculty of their choice.

Jan. 25—The Warren Davis Show, which has undergone several changes since it started last year, this week was televised "live" from our auditorium and library. The program included dancing, singing by the choir, a demonstration of our weight-lifting ability, a discussion on the point system, and a debate by the Phoenix Club. Although only forty-five minutes long, the show was lengthy enough to show others why we are proud of our school.

Diary

February

Feb. 11—Lockport this year again was the scene of laughter, fun, and spills when Danielites “invaded” the toboggan slides and later Melody Lane, where a dance was held. The “Snowball,” as the affair was named, was held in honour, or perhaps because of, the teachers’ convention.

Feb. 18—Dancers, soloists, and a “pop” orchestra, which accompanied “Dry Bones,” greatly added to the enjoyment of this year’s Choral Concert. The banquet for choir members and teachers, following the concert, was held at the Assiniboine Hotel, where a delicious dinner and dancing aptly rounded out the evening.

March

March 4—A dance called “The Rushin’ Hop” was held tonight. The name of the dance, our last before Easter, was suggested by the fact that the “do” was planned very suddenly and quickly.

March 7-21—As all three of our choirs won their respective preliminary competition in the Musical Festival, Daniel was the only senior high school represented in the Earl Grey Trophy competition. After a close contest, the girls’ choir won the coveted trophy.

April

April 6—This is a black day in most of our books: today is the first day of Easter exams.

April 27—The Welfare and Social Committees today worked together to hold our first coke dance of the year. The dance, which lasted from 4:00 until 5:30, was organized to raise funds for the Welfare Committee. An unusual touch was provided by the extraordinary prizes given to winners of “Spot” dances.

May

May 3—The D.M.C.I. Field Day will be held today at Sargent Park. We are expecting a good showing, and are hoping that some new records will be set.

May 5—The “Co-ed” Dance, Daniel’s annual version of a Sadie Hawkin’s affair, this evening was enjoyed by all. This dance is the last before Graduation. The girls, who tonight are paying the bill, have more than a “sneaking” suspicion that their “dates” will ask them to Grad.

May 25—Today the Inter-High Field Day was held at the Winnipeg Stadium. How thrilling it was to see the city’s best high school athletes, doing their best to win.

June

June 17—The 1960 class is graduating today. The service, which includes the valedictory address, the guest speaker’s address, the presentation of awards, and the transfer of emblems from Grade XII to Grade XI, and from Grade XI to Grade X, is at Young United Church. The Graduation Dance will be held in the evening.

Most classes also had a class breakfast to say farewell to their teachers and classmates.

Music at Daniel

The Choral Concert

A choral concert, presented this year in the Civic Auditorium on February 18, again won renown and praise for our choirs. The event was attended by an exceptionally large crowd, and was a great success, musically and financially.

The girls' selections, including "An Old Man Came Courting Me," with soloist Brigitte Fieguth, were followed by the boys' pieces. Songs by the special and mixed choirs completed the first half of the concert.

Roberta Robertson and Patricia Gair provided a pleasant and colorful interlude with their performance of the sword dance.

The intermission was followed by the mixed choir's version of three Negro spirituals, and by Maria Magnusson's playing of Beethoven's Sonata Op. 109 (movements one and two) and the Chopin Etude Op. 25, No. 7. The accent was then placed on foreign melodies, and a Swiss, French-Canadian, and Russian tune were sung, with Randy Wong as soloist in the "Russian Picnic."

Encores "Italian Street Song," with soloist Lynn Walton, and "Dry Bones," the most popular song of the evening, completed the concert.

Our heartfelt thanks are extended to our skilled conductor, Mr. Pierce, and to accompanists Dorothy Martin and Maria Magnusson, all of whom devoted a great deal of time and effort.

The Festival

This year, all of Daniel's choirs entering the festival won in their respective classes. The mixed choir was awarded 93 for "In Silent Night," (which is the highest mark Adjudicator Edgar Boucher has ever given,) and 91 for the test piece, "Non Nobis, Domine." These marks enabled us to retain the Jack Neil Memorial Trophy. The W. A. Cuddy Memorial Shield was again awarded to our boys, who received 88 for "I Triumph," and 89 for their own selection, "On the Banks of Allan Water." For their performance of the test piece, "Snowflakes," and of "Music When Soft Voices Die," the girls, whose marks were in the mid-eighties, by a one-point lead, became the proud winners of the Hon. James Cox Aikens Shield.

In the Earl Grey competition, the girls, much to their own surprise, won the Earl Grey Trophy by defeating nine other choirs, all winners of various classes, including our own boys' and mixed-voice choirs. The adjudicator said that seldom had he heard "Music When Soft Voices Die" better sung. Our mixed choir placed a close second.

The girls' and the mixed choirs each sang one selection at the final concert of the Manitoba Musical Festival.

The White Dress

The girls in the choir this year began wearing the controversial white dress, adorned with a velvet maroon ribbon, and white shoes. This dress, it is hoped, will be the first step towards a maroon robe. Although the dress was discussed during the last school year, all the girls agreed that they should wear the traditional maroon skirt and white blouse for one more year. Because the school skirts had been replaced by regulation charcoal skirts, the seniors, under Lily Loewen, organized a borrowing campaign. They were successful in outfitting all "uniformless members." This year, because of the small number of grade twelve students, a similar plan could not be adopted. The choir was informed that the maroon skirt could not be obtained without a great delay. Thus, since it was a choice between a white dress and the charcoal regulation wrap-around, the dress was chosen.

Some did not like the maroon skirt; many did. Yet has the white dress made any radical changes? The girls are, as in former years, doing their utmost for the school. Can anyone ask more?

The Special Choir

This year a special group, consisting of the "cream" of the mixed choir, was organized to sing on special occasions. Since last fall, the members have spent from thirty to forty minutes a day, Monday to Thursday, on concentrated practice. The choir has been honoured by being asked to sing at the convocation of Gustavus Adolphus College, St. Peters, Minn. Now that the day of departure, which has been set at May 5, draws near, the choir is working harder than ever.

The Library

The Library at Daniel is a bright and cheery room permeated with an atmosphere of wisdom and learning. In the books, stacked on the shelves is the knowledge of the ages. Sun sifts through the windows, illuminating volumes which are a treasure chest of beauty and wonder.

But the Library is also a kingdom peopled by the rare and the common-place. Here, side-by-side with every-day ordinary people, are found creatures so exotic and unusual that they seem products of a twisted or tipsy imagination. Next to the great in history march the unknown; next to the good, the evil. If one but has an imagination, and a wish to meet a few of the inhabitants of this kingdom, the Library becomes a fascinating place.

Both past and current history can be brought alive by means of the media of books and magazines. The shelves in this section are the homes of many interesting people and the scenes of many unusual events. Henry VIII and his many wives romp merrily through them. Here, too, haughty Elizabeth I, and the beautiful Mary, Queen of Scots become vital and living people before our eyes. The wars and conquests throughout the ages become actual happenings, rather than dates to be memorized for an exam.

Who says it's expensive to travel? With the facilities in the Library, it needn't be. The books in the travel section take us to strange and far-away lands. Through them we can sample and enjoy the customs and lives of people from the Arctic to Arabia. Through them, also, we can visit world-famous scenes and little known beauty spots. All this can be done at no more than the cost of the little mental energy involved in reading.

In the pages of the science section are set down with painstaking and exacting care, the records and experiments involved in the discoveries of various ancient and modern miracles. Pasteurization, penicillin, plastics and synthetics are included here. It is in this section that we can peer over the shoulders of men such as Banting, Pasteur, and Koch, and see them engrossed in their work to improve the lot of man.

There are many other fascinating parts to this kingdom. Sports events are re-enacted in authentic detail; art masterpieces of the world are conjured up before our eyes; stories on just about any subject abound.

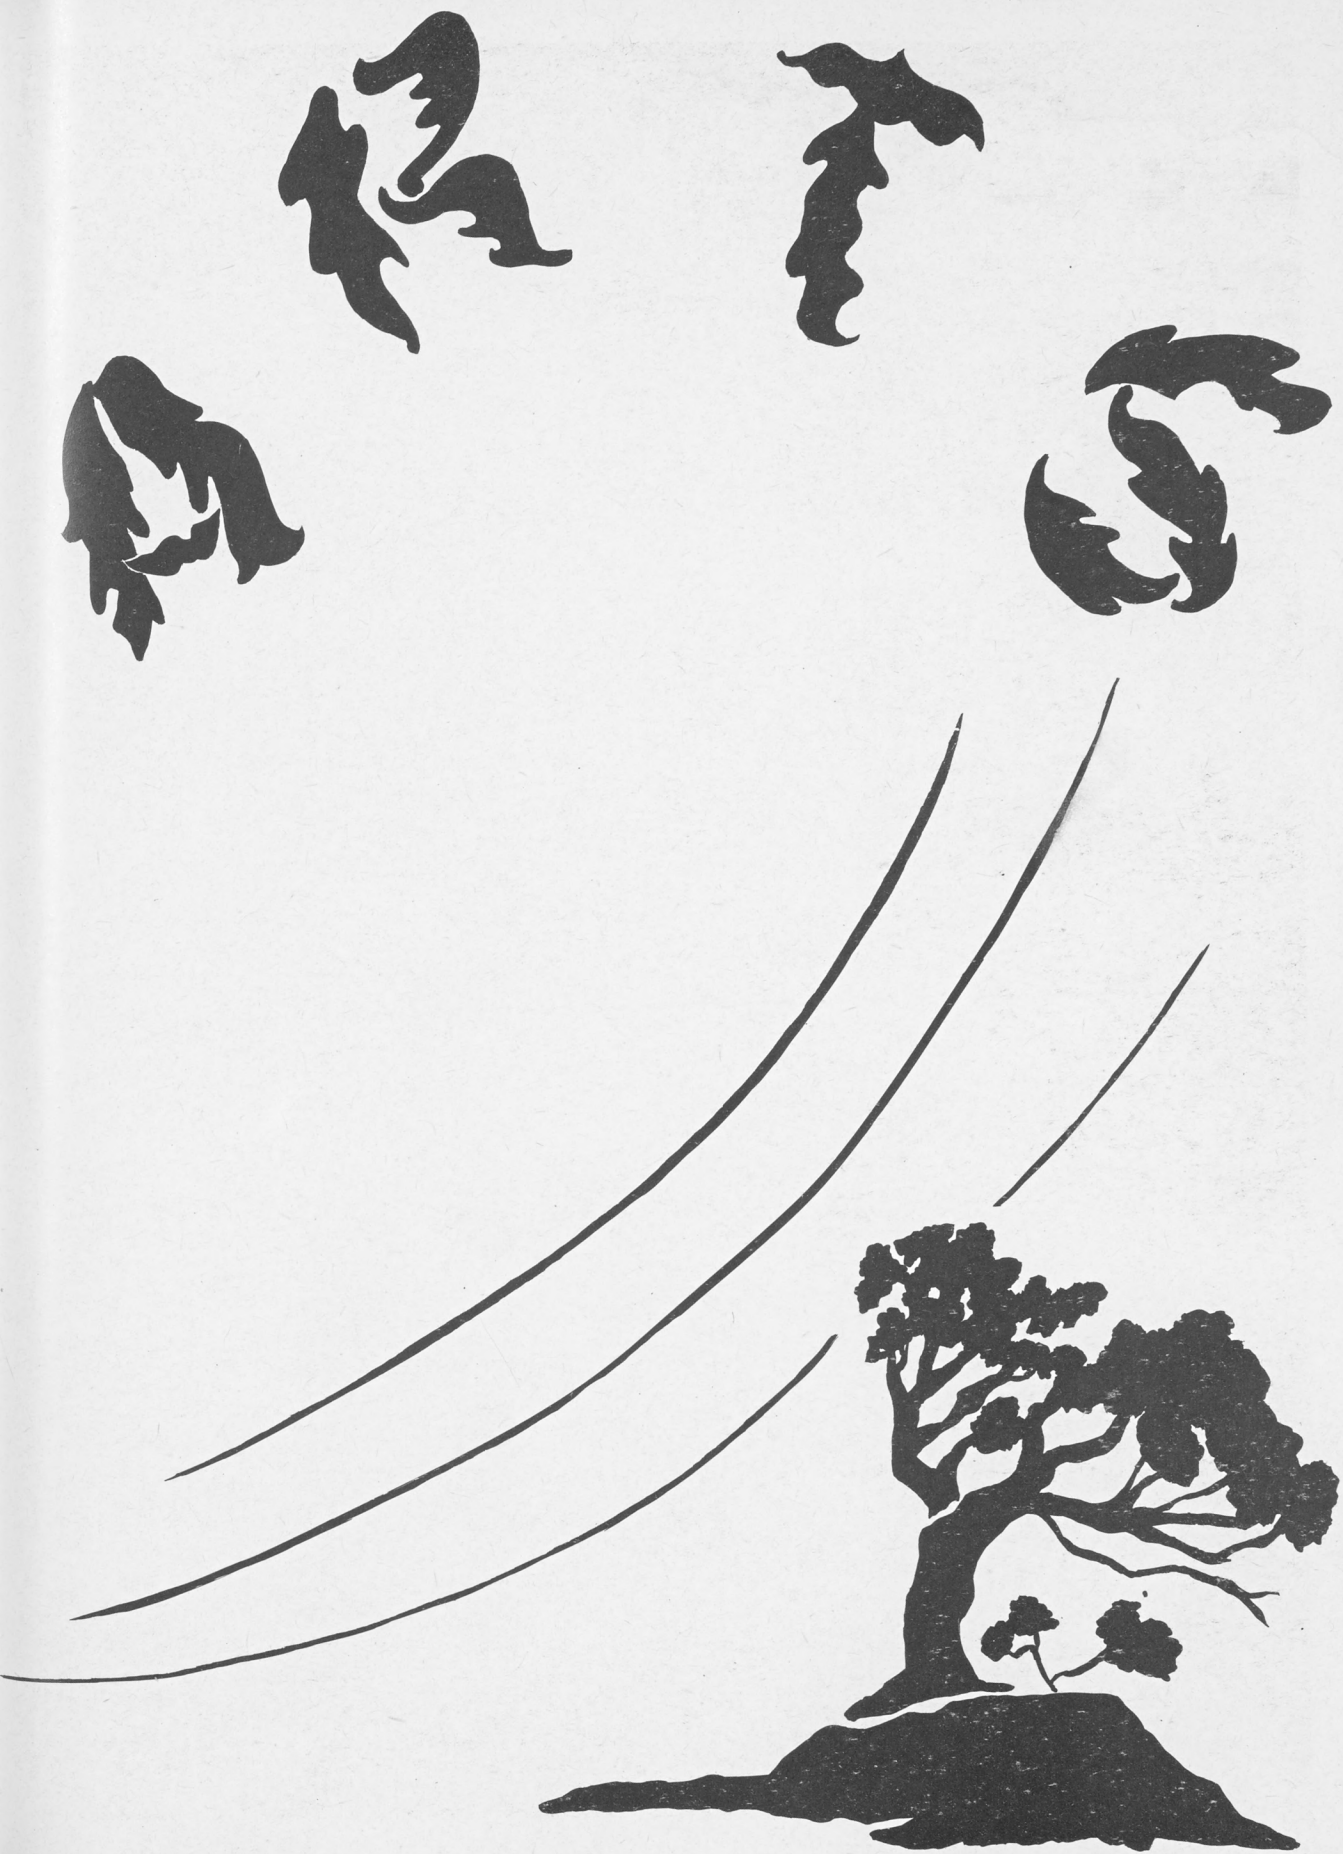

The Library is also important as a source of current information. In the copious files, at the front of the room, is stored minute and up-to-the-minute information on just about any topic that could possibly be assigned for discussion, debate, or essay. This information is clipped daily from papers and magazines.

The able ruler of the kingdom of fact and fantasy sits at the front of the room. Always willing to help the seeker in his search for adventure, knowledge, or amusement, is Miss Florence, the librarian.

Art

This has been an especially enjoyable year for art students because of the variety of the art course.

During the fall, students armed with sketch boards, and paper and pencil spent some time outdoors sketching scenes surrounding our school.

In our next project, we illustrated a poem from our literature texts. We drew several practice pictures in chalk before we attempted anything with paint in this interesting project.

Art students had several lessons in patience and endurance when they took turns modeling in class. The models were sketched with pencil, charcoal, and chalk.

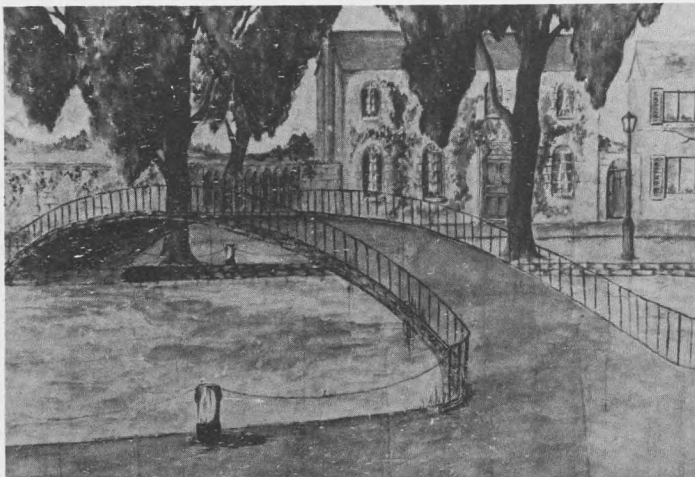

Several students turned in sketches for the "Breezes" cover, while others worked on dividers and room numbers for the same publication. Roseanne Taylor's cover was chosen for this year's "Breezes" in a very close competition.

We were fortunate this year in visiting the Winnipeg Art Gallery to view an exhibition of art of French Canada. The sketches we made here were later used in the making of murals and designs on the subject of French Canada.

The art course has been both interesting and profitable this year.

"Toboggan Run"

The silver moon shines brightly and the stars
Fill the black heavens.
All the earth rushes swiftly by
And the heavens rock
As though shaken by some thrilling ecstasy.
The same rapture fills my soul
As the toboggan flies over the icy slope.
I am alone with the vast universe—
Alone with the fathomless mysteries of the unknown.

—DONNA STARK, Room 7

"The Harbour"

In the harbour, softly rolling,
Lies the schooner, rigg'd and sailed.
Its lantern, glowing in the charthouse,
By the swaying shrouds is veiled.
In the rippling water glimmers
The image of this ghostly sight:
Moonlight on a stately schooner,
Anchored on a starry night.

Jutting from the rocky landscape,
Near the narrow harbour-mouth,
The lighthouse casts its brilliant beacon
To the north, and then the south.
Beams which overpower the starlight
Warn the ships away from shore,
Where the rocks mean sure disaster,
And many a boat was seen no more.

Then weathered, use-worn beams creak softly,
As the schooner comes to life;
Cannons glisten in the portals;
Men prepare to join the strife.
Dawn breaks slowly on the sky-line;
Billowed sails have caught the wind.
Seaward glides the war-decked schooner,
Proud colours to the main-mast pinned.

—BART HICKS, Room 7

"The Winter Sky"

The branches of the bare, dark trees
Weave a pattern
On the sky.
The white and puffy clouds
Are caught,
Entangled in this mesh,
Losing their liberty
And their grace;
Until finally they flee
From the reaches
Of the clutching branches,
And again float free
Through the clear winter sky.

—HELEN MACKLEM, Room 7

"A Leaf In Autumn"

A leaf fell to the ground
In a whirling
Swirling eddy
From the burnished beauty
Of the tree above.
It lay alone
And desolate,
Growing dry and brown
In the autumn air;
Losing its gold-plate covering
And slowly dying.

—HELEN MACKLEM, Room 7

"Peace"

The golden sunset on a silver lake
Fills my soul with joy, my heart with peace
Nature's endless pattern never breaks
And the beauties that are hers will never cease.

As this quiet peace comes over me,
And thoughts of life run through my mind,
I think of all the joys never to be,
And all the happiness we never find.

I think of hubbub and the endless strain of life;
Of wars and killing, and of hate.
A reckless world that trades its peace for what?
A tossed and shaken world of pain and strife.

And as I sit there and the sun goes down
Upon a troubled world I cannot shun,
I'm glad to know that I can never frown
As long as I find peace in setting sun.

—PATRICIA YEO, Room 23

"Sleigh Ride"

The sleigh sped over
The icy roads,
And happy laughter
Rang out
Over the frozen world.
The horses
Shook their heads,
Making the bells on their harness
Sing a tinkling song
Of joy,
To pierce the night air
And rouse the moon
From its slumber.

—HELEN MACKLEM, Room 7

"Our House"

There is laughter at our house and tears,
There is sorrow and sadness,
There is joy and gladness,
Each has its place through the years;
But always there has remained
A light of hope and sympathy,
A sense of warmth and harmony.

—CHERYL SIMMONDS, Room 7

"Desert Night"

Darkness came swiftly.
Without a protest
Twilight
gave way to Night.

The sky resembled
black velvet,
set with rhinestones—
or diamonds,
millions of them
glittering,
twinkling.

The breeze sighed.
From the mountains
it bore
the fragrance
of Pine—wafting it
across the Desert.

A whippoorwill called—
Lonely
in the silence.
An owl passed by—barely disturbing
the air.

The Moon rose—shedding silver
below her.
The Desert became a fairyland.

Saguaro—silvered
in the moonlight,
stood tall
and empty—forgotten.

—MAUREEN SCOTT, Room 45

"Mountains"

The sun rises in the East
To brighten the earth below,
And all of nature is blest
With a lustrous golden glow.

I have seen them rise above the blue,
With lovely snow-capped tops,
Towering to show their silvery hue
Above the tinted slopes.

The sun shines down upon their crowns
Like a glorious rhapsody,
Played by a golden harp,
From a Schubert melody.

The day wears on and nightfall comes
To cover the earth below,
And lovely colours—pink, blue and mauve
Decorate the sky, for us, below.

The melody fades, the sun sinks
Behind the mountain peaks
To bathe the earth with a lustrous glow,
Then darkens, and so to sleep.

—DIANE PUSEY, Room 39

Night

When the alarm clock went off, Edie Jones got up and dressed in the dark, feeling for her clothes, feeling for the comb to do her hair. In this huge, old-fashioned farmhouse, the bedroom was icy, and from the window came a stinging whiff of frosty air. The bannister was cold under her palm, guiding her as she tiptoed downstairs in order not to wake her father. She knew the way as well as if she could see, running her hand down the polished wood, past the known joins and the little humps and dimples to the great knob at the bottom.

It was market day and Edie raced about doing her chores before breakfast. Presently she heard her father upstairs. He was early, wasn't he? She opened the glass of the big clock and passed her hand, light as a shadow, over the face. But of course! How silly! She couldn't get used to her own new watch on her wrist — a blind person's watch that had been given to her as her twenty-first birthday present. She cupped her palm over her watch with a surge of happy possession.

After lighting the coal-oil lamp for her father, she pulled on her rubber boots and went out to the cows. Soon, with her forehead pressed to the warm flank, Edie began to milk. How good, how satisfying milking was. Edie's strong fingers rippled in the accustomed task, and her mind began to move. Her adventurous, leaping mind began to move forward in thought. What did it feel like to see — to have an extra and never-before-experienced sense unlike anything she already knew. Although this experience Edie was never to have, it would not be missed, for her days were full of the joys and happiness of life around her.

When she had finished in the milking shed, she went back to the house, cleaned up, washed, and began to think of breakfast. Her hands moved like moths around the lamp to see if it were still alight. No, father must have blown it out about three minutes ago, the chimney was still giving out heat. That meant it must be about — silly! You've got a watch now. She snapped it open and touched the hands. Yes, time for breakfast.

Twenty minutes later she was out by the road, waiting for the bus that was to take her to Minden. Cars sang along the tarred road in front of her, telegraph wires sang above. Presently she heard the bus and signalled. Inside, she gossiped with her friends until they reached town.

At the hairdresser's, sliding her arms into the plastic surplice sleeves of the overall, Edie said, "What about this new haircut I've been reading about? My braille newspaper says . . ."

When it was all done and her hair smelling beautiful, she came out of the shop and stood a moment in the tide of people surging up the street from the bus park. For a second she hesitated and then happily tapped her way, with her cane, to it, found the right bus, and got in. All the habitués began to arrive then, along with one or two strangers. One of the strangers took the seat next to Edie — a big woman who kept trying to peek out of the window — at the clock in the Norman tower, probably.

"Can you see what time it is?" asked the stranger after a few minutes of twisting.

"It's one minute to twelve," answered Edie, with her hand on her watch.

"Thank you," said the woman. "I haven't my glasses you see, and your eyes are younger than mine."

—ADRIANNE KOHUT, Room 49

An Evening Alone

The evening my parents telephoned from a farmhouse fifty miles away to inform me that the car had become the victim of the sticky gumbo which comprises a rural road during the slush season, I was not in the least perturbed. I knew they would take a hotel room in the nearest town; and the prospect of spending the night alone was rather pleasant, for it gave me a feeling of adulthood and responsibility which was delightful as it was novel. Satisfied with the world and everything in it, particularly myself, I calmly settled down at the desk to do my homework.

Since five people telephoned that night, and two of my friends called at the door, I was well occupied for the first part of the evening. Of course, I told them all of my new status as lady of the house, and of course I flattered myself that they all treated me with increased respect.

But when at last the doorbell and the telephone had stopped screaming, I began to notice that I had only one light on, and that the little halo around my desk was surrounded by obscurity. My powers of concentration were affected. I unwound my feet from the rungs of my chair and turned on all the lights—no sense in ruining my eyesight by trying to work in total darkness!

A few minutes later, I began to find the eerie silence equally disturbing. I switched on the radio, thinking, "Might as well hear the Ten O'clock News." (This was the first sign of my awakening interest in newscasts.)

By this time, I had finished as much homework as I intended to do—for every true student trusts a little to luck. I turned from the radio to the television for companionship. Because the set was due for major surgery, the sound was unfortunately rather garbled; but I could translate enough to realize that I was watching a prime specimen of the murder mystery. After witnessing several gory deeds, I began to hear noises in every part of the house—clunks, thuds, and scrapes, as of windows being pried open. I was somewhat perturbed, but not frightened. I ignored the ice-cubes on my spine and restrained my unreasoning urge to crayon the word "lpleh" from left to right across the front window. I had personally locked the doors, so of course I was safe. Silly!

All at once a strangled screech jangled every nerve I possessed. Glancing terrified around the room, I saw that the Hooded Terror had struck again. He now had to his credit four stabbings, one shooting, and three harrowing escapes. This play was doing nothing for my morale! I arose resolutely and made a tour of inspection, supplied with a flashlight in case of a power failure and gripping a bread-knife in case I should suddenly want a snack. My curiosity satisfied, I scurried to my room to eavesdrop on the old house as it muttered suspiciously to the frost.

The next day, my parents were embarrassingly inquisitive. Had I finished my homework? Had I gone to sleep early? I hadn't been nervous, had I? Well, how had I spent the evening?

I avoided answering.

At The Swimming Pool

The first time I went to the swimming pool I was hypnotized by the sight of the cool green water gently lapping at the sides of the pool. I had never seen such an inviting sight. I rushed into the locker room, put on my bathing suit, ran-up to the swimming pool and heedlessly jumped in. My heart stopped, the blood froze in my veins. The water was ice cold! I could not get out fast enough. I stood for many minutes on the side of the pool, teeth chattering. I rubbed my arms but the sensation of warmth would not return. Throwing caution to the winds I entered the pool again, more carefully this time.

During this first visit I began to recognize the different characters who frequented the pool. The most easily seen of all the characters is the muscle-man type. This type cannot swim at all. He just goes to the pool to show off. Not wanting to be left out of things he goes through all the motions of swimming, hopping with one foot on the bottom. The other type is the most dangerous, the professional show-off. This type dives off the highest diving board, not caring who is swimming under it at the time. It was not long before I became an old hand at avoiding going under the diving boards.

It was after I left the pool I found the real enjoyment of going to the swimming pool. A group of us would get together in the locker-room and boast about the death-defying dives we completed. Of course we didn't believe each other. Then, someone started a towel fight and soon everyone had red spots on his arms and legs where he had been hit with a towel. When we all were dressed we left and stood by the doors watching again that cool green water and wishing we had not left so soon.

How I Learned To Ride A Horse

Down a dusty road thundered a horse with its rider wrapped around its neck and with his legs flying in all directions. This rider was I, Brian Senebald, before I learned how to ride a horse.

The first step was getting on the horse. My first thought was to put up a step ladder and climb up.

So, I set up the ladder beside the horse and climbed up, but every time I went to put my leg over the horse's back, he moved away and I would land on the ground. It was very embarrassing because all the people around were laughing at me. A man then stepped forward and asked me if I was having trouble. I told him that I was having a bit. I saw by a crest on his arm that he was a riding instructor. He then proceeded to show me how to mount the horse. The first thing was to mount from the left hand side. I stood on the left hand side with the reins in my hand all ready to proceed. He then told me to put my left foot in the stirrup and grab the saddle horn. From that position I was to swing up. Well, now I was on the horse and ready to go.

The second step was to learn the correct way of sitting in the saddle. I reached around the horse's neck and we started off. Somehow, I didn't think that this was the right way to sit because the saddle horn was punching me in the stomach each time the horse took a step. Then the instructor came to the rescue. He told me to sit up and go with the horse as he trotted or galloped. I was supposed to pretend that the horse and I were just one creature.

Now that I was mounted and knew how to sit in the saddle, I had to learn how to rein the horse. I was sitting in the saddle wondering what to do when I saw the horse's ears. I grabbed them, but I guess the horse didn't like it because he threw his head down and gave a little kick with his back feet. I found myself flat on my back looking up at the sky. Again, the instructor helped me. He told me to hold the reins in my left hand and to guide the horse with the reins. He led the horse up and down until I could get the feeling of the reins in my hand. He told me that some horses are neck-reined and others have to be pulled by the left rein if they are to turn to the left. My horse was neck-reined so I was lucky. Once I knew how to rein my horse I found it easy.

Well, I was on the horse and knew how to sit and rein the horse, but the problem was how to get off. I didn't want to grab his ears again because I didn't feel like flying through the air and landing on my back. This was a bit rough. I asked the instructor how to get off and he told me that it was easy. I was to grip the saddle horn again and swing down. This also was done on the left hand side.

Now that I know how to ride it is very enjoyable and healthful.

The Value of A Real Sense of Humour

A sense of humour helps you make friends, keep friends, and generally makes life enjoyable. But the real value of a sense of humour is on those "off" days everyone experiences now and then. Your sense of humour may keep you from going crazy. When you wake up, feeling tired and sick to your stomach, and find out, after looking at your watch, that even if you get up right away you will probably be late for school, you should be able to see the humour in your forgetting to set your alarm last night.

As you are lying in your bed contemplating whether or not you should bother to get up your mother begins to yell at you and shouts about six times, "Get up, you're going to be late!" After having the question of whether or not you are going to get up, so easily solved for you, you jump out of bed and immediately land on your little brother's marbles. You see how funny it is and how cute it was of your little brother to have left them there after playing with them last night.

A hectic fifteen minutes later you can be seen running down your back lane in an attempt to get to school on time. You think back over the humorous incidents that had occurred since you had gotten up. While getting dressed you remembered that you had forgotten to study for your French test today and had also forgotten to do your history essay, which incidentally counted for ten term marks. Now, out in the fresh air your sense of humour helps you to see the humour in your forgetting to do your assignments.

It is now thirty seconds to nine and you are just running up to your locker. You say to yourself that today you will open your lock on the first try. As the nine o'clock bell clangs in your ears you can be seen still frantically kicking at your lock trying to get it opened. This should cause you to chuckle at yourself if you have a real sense of humour. You think over with a smile how, after having been late three times during this week, the principal said that if you were late again this week he would give you a week's detention.

Well, after a few more humorous incidents four o'clock finally rolls around. Nothing of interest happens to you while you are walking home and you feel that you can now rest easy. You feel proud to have kept your sense of humour throughout this trying day. But, while walking up your back stairs you slip and tumble down the stairs. While lying at the foot of your stairs you look at your books sitting in a puddle of snowy mud and your dirty, partially torn new coat. Your real sense of humour should cause you to laugh, because you forgot about the loose stair. But what is this? Why, you're crying!

The Price of Power

To the casual tourist, Creston created the impression of an expanding town similar to the hundreds that dotted and dominated the mid-western states. Autumn carved a change in the bustling tone of the community and its atmosphere dissolved to tranquility. It was at such times that local elected officers contested their positions and political palaver attained a peak.

The battle for the esteemed position of mayor had stirred controversy with greater variation and vividness than the painted leaves. The retiring public officer had been obligated by age to forego the toilsome tasks of an election campaign and the contest fell to the ambitious powerful men of Creston.

Three newspaper men conversed on the subject during their lunch period. One voiced, "I think Doctor Ness has the best chance because of his popularity and his long list of accomplishments for the community."

Another answered, "But you underestimate Malson's power. As president of the town textile company, he holds the reins on a large industrial vote."

The first stated, "Maybe you're right. I think this election may see the ruin of a life long friendship between Malson and Ness."

The third injected, "What about Bevan?"

The other two laughed. Then a reply, "Bevan is a staunch county farmer and nothing more. He'll never be mayor—not here in Creston anyway."

"He can only plant potatoes, husk corn."

The others chuckled. The luncheon ended on a humorous note.

The September sun poured its strong rays upon Henry Malson as he walked from his car to the modern medical office operated by Doctor Ness. He breathed the brisk air. He felt good, alive. He was positive that Ness would give him an assurance of outstanding health.

After the check-up, Ness spoke to Malson in the reception room.

Ness said, "Hate to tell you this, Henry."

"What! Something wrong with me?"

Ness made a sudden mental decision. "No. I hesitated because you're absolutely healthy. Robust and ready to be the next mayor."

Malson laughed, "Don't feel so despondent, Ness. You may get a few votes."

"Thanks."

"Don't mention it. You'll be able to count them on your fingers."

Ness lacked any confidence of winning and Malson delighted in shattering the smallest fragment of hope that Ness may have harboured.

But Malson had calculated his opponent weakly.

At the moment when Malson returned to the sun splashed street, Doctor Ness moved to his surgical office, consumed in thought while ponderous puffs drifted from his cigar to become white threads or tiny thunderheads on the warm air of the room. Insidious ideas flickered through his brain like dying sparks of an evening fire. Ness had withheld the information that Malson was the victim of an acute heart condition. Ness' strategy was simple. If Malson was forced to withdraw from the contest now, Bevan would have time to accumulate votes and spread influence, but if Malson retired just a few days before the election date, all the Malson support would automatically transfer to Ness—and Bevan would be drowned at the polls.

Ness studied the blue sky beyond the glittering glass window. He eagerly anticipated the moment when he would tell Malson that for health reasons, the Malson name must be struck off the ballots. The fact of Malson's weak heart filled Doctor Ness with a glowing satisfaction, bolstering his self-confidence. He made a report and buried it in his files.

September faded to October, and excitement teemed from every corner of Creston. The three candidates delivered wordy speeches saturated with the taste of vacant promises.

Five days before the actual election, Doctor Ness' office nurse answered a phone call.

"Hello."

"Hello, this is Elaine Malson. Henry Malson's wife."

"Yes?"

"My husband has been complaining of chest pains lately."

"I believe he was here for a check-up two weeks ago."

"Yes, I know. But—"

"Just a minute. I'll check his personal case file."

"Thank you."

The nurse returned to the phone after several minutes. Her voice was transformed. It was tinged with excitement, fear.

"There — there is no mention of anything on record."

"I'll call again, later. Ness is out campaigning, isn't he?"

"Yes," the nurse stammered. "Ness is out. You — you call back later."

The nurse replaced the receiver. Her eyes were fixed in horror at the words in front of her. She particularly noticed a simple sentence scribbled in the doctor's flary handwriting. It was, "He can't last for more than nine months."

Doctor Ness returned to the office in the late afternoon. His face betrayed lingering lines of deep meditation and anxiety.

The nurse said, "I want to speak to you."

Ness replied, "Not now. I have to write a speech for the Banker's luncheon tomorrow. It has got to be good, they say Bevan is gathering support."

He was on the verge of continuing his monologue but the persistent girl interrupted, "It's important."

"Please, not now. Is it concerning a patient?"

"Yes," she retorted. "Henry Malson."

He whitened. Coolly he mouthed the words, "What about him?"

"He's a sick man. Why didn't you tell him so?"

Ness searched for words but uttered insignificant murmurings, "Because—because of the election."

"Election! Did you want to kill him? He's chasing about getting votes when he should be in a hospital bed! How could you? I'm going to get the police, the whole town is going to hear about this! Why you're a—a potential murderer!"

"Wait!" He was desperate now. "Wait, I can explain."

The phone broke the height of his wavering voice.

The nurse picked it up.

"It's for you," she said, and handed him the phone.

A weak voice met his ear. "Doc Ness, come over to Blakely Hall. Malson fainted in the middle of his speech. Hurry! It could be serious!"

Then another voice blared fearfully, "Ness, I think it is too late. Malson is dead."

Ness could hear newspaper men buzzing over the scene like flies attracted by decaying materials.

The voice continued, "I think he's dead. Ness, are you still there?"

Ness formed the words but they died in his throat, "He can't be. He can't be. I was going to tell him. I meant to tell him. He can't be dead."

The voice loudened, "Ness, you still there?"

The doctor muttered, "Yes, yes, I'll be right over."

Ness ran out into the street. In a few minutes he was in a cab headed for the hall which was two miles from the heart of Creston.

His mind was a frenzy of disconnected thought. His career as a doctor in town would be over, broken by his own ambition and cunning.

He stared through the window blankly, in a defeated manner. Then his eyes focused on a figure seated on a tractor which crawled over a smooth field. The fingers of the setting sun stained this silhouette and the soil to a pure sanguine. Suddenly, Ness recognized the man. It was Robert Bevan, the next mayor of Creston.

A Change of Heart

The door slammed hard, and Howard took the stairs two at a time. In the kitchen, his mother sighed. She could always tell his mood by the way he closed the door, and that angry slam was definitely not a good sign.

Upstairs, Howard sat brooding and counting his wounds. First there was Kathy, who was supposed to be his girl friend. Some girl friend! She had gone out with him only once in the last two weeks, despite his urgent entreaties. Too much homework, she said. He had almost gotten to the point of trying to get another girl, but after all, changing girl friends was a serious business, and one didn't rush into it without some thought beforehand. He said nothing to Kathy about the way she was behaving because he prided himself on being the strong, silent type. But, he decided, the next time she refused a date, something drastic would happen. What the "something drastic" was he did not know, but he was sure it would happen all the same.

Then there was his father. Howard had been under the impression that fathers were supposed to provide for their families, so this morning he had asked his father if he could have a new shirt. This wasn't just any shirt; it was a special shirt. The whole basketball team, of which Howard was a member, had decided to buy these shirts, so that whenever they wore them altogether, everyone would know beyond a doubt that they were the basketball team. (In a large school like Howard's you could never be sure that everyone knew exactly who you were). Howard thought it a great idea, but Howard's father did not. Howard's father had never heard anything so ridiculous and concealed in his life. Howard could not have the shirt. That was a deadly blow. Howard had even considered buying the shirt out of his own measly allowance, but after all, he didn't want the shirt that much.

After the battle with his father, one would think Howard would have been left in peace for the rest of the day. How untrue! Mr. Dailey, his chemistry teacher, had chosen to give a long, unfavorable speech in front of the whole class on the condition of Howard's chemistry notebook. Naturally he had overlooked the brilliant notes and the diagrams drawn with a truly artistic touch, and had only seen the scrawly handwriting, the occasional ink splashes, and the doodles in the margin (although those, too, were drawn with a truly artistic touch). Howard had been simply mortified, and he vowed a dreadful revenge on Mr. Dailey.

As if all this weren't enough, Howard had managed with a stroke of genius to trip over the microphone cord and to fall flat on his face in front of the whole school when the basketball team was being called out on the stage.

So now Howard sat brooding. He had reached the decision that there was no hope for the human race. Unless it improved in its actions toward Howard Davidson, it was doomed. Howard planned his revenge, goaded by the thought that tomorrow was his seventeenth birthday, and that they had ruined the only seventeenth birthday he'd ever have.

First he thought of suicide. Everyone would be sorry when they saw him lying in his coffin cold and dead. But that would be too late for them to be sorry. Suicide was out. He wondered if one could join the Foreign Legion when one is only seventeen. That would certainly have effect. The whole school would miss the tallest member of the basketball team, and Kathy would suffer agonies of jealousy, thinking of those beautiful Arab girls he'd be exposed to. But the problem was were to get the money for a trip to wherever-one-goes-to-join-the-Foreign-Legion. He thought of being the first man to reach the moon. That would show Mr. Dailey his great scientific abilities. But Howard had to admit that he actually had no great scientific abilities except for the art of always combining things in a way so that they blew up all over the chem lab. Perhaps he would become a beatnik. His father would not be able to endure the thought that his only son had turned out to be a beatnik. He thought of what the guys at school would say: "Howard is a beat with wet feet." Oh well, he wouldn't have made a very good beatnik anyway. "I'll think of something," he vowed, and then and there he declared a private war with the world.

The next morning at school as he stomped past Kathy's locker, she called to him with a mischievous smile on her face. "I've got a surprise for you," she said.

"How nice," Howard replied sarcastically.

Kathy pulled a large box with a huge red bow on it out of her locker. "Happy birthday," she beamed, handing him the box, and giving him a peck on the cheek after she made sure no one was looking.

Howard opened the gaily wrapped present and pulled out a beautiful blue sweater in a bulky design.

"I've been knitting for the past two weeks," Kathy informed him, nervously waiting for his reaction. "That was my homework. I made it in blue 'cause I knew it was your favourite colour."

Howard did not even get a chance to thank her, for the bell rang just then and she dashed off to her room. He moved in a warm glow the rest of the day until he found himself in Mr. Dailey's room. It was only then that he remembered his private war with the world, and he set his teeth and prepared for the first battle.

Mr. Dailey began to hand back some papers. "I was very pleased with this report you handed in, Howard. It's really an outstanding piece of work. In fact," he continued jokingly, "it almost makes up for that notebook of yours." The class laughed at this, and after a moment, Howard joined in too.

When he arrived home that afternoon, Howard's father said, "I'd like to speak to you, son." Howard followed reluctantly into the living room and sat down. "I've been thinking about your allowance, and seeing as you're one year older as of today, I've decided to raise it . . . let's say about fifty per cent. Is that all right with you?"

Howard was a little stunned. "Why, sure," he said, and remembered to add, "Thank you sir." He sat there for a while after his father had gone. "Maybe the world isn't such a bad place after all," he thought. "Maybe there's still hope for mankind." He watched the warm sunlight pouring in through the window, and he knew that in spite of everything, life was good. He went whistling up to his room, and closed the door gently.

HELEN MACKLEM, Room 7

Homer Runs Away

Homer peeked out the door of his bedroom and peered down the gloomy hall. Seeing the coast clear, he gingerly picked up his suitcase and tiptoed down the stairs.

"Clumsy, am I?" he thought. "Well, I'll show them!" But unfortunately his foot slipped on the loose carpeting and he tumbled down the last four steps with a crash that should have wakened the next-door neighbours. Oddly, there was no response from upstairs, and, relieved, Homer resumed his painstaking progress towards the kitchen. Once there, he put the carefully planned note to the effect that he would be detained late at school, on the table. That finished, he collected his mother's savings, a grand total of seven dollars, and left the house.

Homer walked. It seemed he had never walked so far in his life. But while he was walking, Homer had a chance to think. Almost all his life he had been the class 'dummock,' the 'stooge.' The ridicule at school had been getting worse, and his parents didn't seem to care at all. So he had made up his mind to leave home, and "then they would be sorry!" And so, Homer resolutely tramped on.

By lunch-time, Homer was out on the open highway leading into the big city. He decided that it was time for nourishment, and proceeded to make camp under the shade of a large oak tree. The tree was growing on a high bluff, and he could look down on the town in the distance. Munching thoughtfully on an overstuffed peanut butter and jelly sandwich, he picked out the big high school, and the place where his home would be if the big, smoking factory weren't in the way. Then he turned towards the panorama of green hills, and the smudge that was the city beyond. He would get a job there, and earn his own way. Oh, wouldn't he make his friends sorry!

His lunch finished, Homer trod on down the road. The sun got higher and his feet more tired, and he sat down to rest at more frequent intervals.

Near mid-afternoon a large yellow school-bus full of happy, boisterous tots careened past him and lurched around the bend. "Crazy driver," thought Homer. "He took that corner much too fast." Suddenly there was a loud crash from the direction of the bend ahead. Homer jumped to his feet and ran puffingly up to the sharp curve. There, lying on its side in the ditch, one wheel spinning languidly, was the bus. Hearing the cries of the frightened children, trapped inside, Homer ran to the wrecked vehicle.

He lowered himself carefully into the bus. There he saw that a seat had ripped loose and blocked the aisle. Homer's head began to spin. What could he do? If he tried to help the children, he'd probably make matters worse. But then their pitiful sobs reached his ears, and he made his decision immediately.

A glance to his right revealed the driver, hunched over the steering wheel. He was unconscious. Homer bent to lift the toppled seat. Miraculously, only a few of the children were hurt. He helped the uninjured out of the bus, and then he went into the wreck again to look after the others.

These Homer tended quickly. The worst-off by far was a little girl whose foot was caught under a seat. Her ankle was obviously broken. Homer's class in first-aid was coming back to him now. He had nearly failed the test, but in the press of emergency he went beyond himself. He gingerly lifted the seat off the crushed limb, and, being careful not to disturb the injury, he carried the child onto the carpet of warm green grass. He looked around questioningly, at a loss to find splints for the break. As he scanned the area his eyes fell on the books of one of the children. There he saw the end of a twelve-inch rule protruding from the pile. He quickly jumped up and located enough for his purpose. Then he concentrated on setting the ankle.

Everyone looked after, Homer ran up to the road and flagged down an approaching pick-up. "Go back to town," he yelled, "and get an ambulance up here fast."

As the scream of the sirens died away, the men in the police cruisers and ambulances didn't notice a short, weary, and grease-stained figure slip by and started trudging down the road in the general direction of town.

Homer was shambling along the highway when he heard the creak of a car coming to a stop beside him in the twilight. He turned, and saw that it was his Uncle Frank in his car. "Thought I recognized you," said his uncle. "Hop in, Homer. I'll take you home."

Nodding in appreciation, Homer gratefully crawled in on the seat and began to doze.

When he awoke again, it was to the buzz of high-pitched conversation. He caught the phrases 'When I was a boy—' and 'Unheard of—'. Rubbing his eyes, he sat up, and was surprised to find himself on his bed.

"Oh! You're awake now, young man!" said his father. His father always called him 'young man' when he was angry.

"Not now, dear," his mother intervened. Good old Mom! She always had a good word for him. "Go to sleep, now, Homer, and we'll discuss this in the morning."

"Hmph!" grunted his father. "Running away from home! Why I ought to—." Gently but firmly, Mother was manoeuvring him downstairs, and Homer was left alone.

"Son, son!" Homer awoke with a start. His father was shaking him frantically by the shoulder. He had the town daily in his hand, and he was trembling with excitement. Homer rubbed the drowse from his eyes, and mumbled acknowledgment.

"We read it in the morning paper. I—we—."

"What your father is trying to say, Homer, is that we didn't mean what we said yesterday. That is, we didn't realize the circumstances."

"Yes!" exclaimed his father. "It says right here, 'Boy Hero Rescues Trapped Children.' Why—why, you're a hero!"

The End

—BART HICKS, Room 7

Death In Disguise

On a small open stretch of the Korean plain lay a dead body. It was the fourth guard that had been murdered in a week. Only a short time had the platoon been stationed there, and already four guards had been killed, stabbed in the back on an open stretch of plain and without a chance to fire a shot.

The camp was encircled by a horseshoe rock formation and other guards were all around on the boulders, but nothing had been seen by them. It was on the open side of the horseshoe encampment where the murders took place.

Major Brooker called Captain Johnston into the temporarily established office. He looked worried and he frowned as he began to speak. The Major expressed his fear that the Japs killed the guards because they wished to get someone or something into the camp. In view of the circumstances Major Brooker was reluctant to order someone to stand guard at that same post. Instead, Captain Johnston was to ask for a volunteer from his men.

The Captain slowly walked to the part of the camp where his company of men were stationed. He called them all around him and requested attention. Then he explained the situation to them, asking for a volunteer. Silence followed. Then Bob Kelly stepped out. The Captain gave him a slap on the back and thanked him.

Bob was a young man of twenty-two. He had kept his eyes well open all through the war. He had always calculated when to be reckless, knowing it was kill or be killed. He had outlived many friends through dangerous struggles, and now felt this opportunity beckoning to him.

Evening came. Captain Johnston called for Bob, shook hands with him, sincerely warned him to be careful, and then gave him a high-powered machine gun. The Captain himself drove Bob to his post, again warned him, and left.

Bob surveyed his position. He was on an open stretch of plain and no cover was within two hundred yards of where he stood. He knew that was too far to throw a knife accurately. Bob began to concentrate. He could not think of any possible way someone could get close to him without his noticing it. There was nothing to do but wait. He walked around in a circle, listening and watching attentively. The full moon was brightly shining in the night, and Bob knew it was to his advantage.

Nothing happened for a long time. He began to wonder if anything would happen that night. Then all of a sudden something moved. Bob squinted and held his machine gun ready. Then he noticed that it was only a dog. Bob whirled around. Nothing was behind him. He had thought that the dog might be used to attract his attention while someone crept up behind him, but his hunch proved wrong. He now observed the huge animal. Something was wrong with it. It limped and staggered strangely. As Bob studied the enormous dog the moon lit up the animal's face and he received a cruel shock. This big, black dog had no eyes, just two hollows; yet it was staggering directly towards him. Bob was horrified. His spine and scalp tingled strangely and his eyes opened wide. He did not believe in demons, but this discovery had stunned his reasoning. He screamed, "Keep away!" holding his rifle in firing position. The dog took a mighty leap and jumped directly at him.

Bob, in a frenzy, pulled the gun's firing lever. When he dared to approach the now motionless mass he saw a man with a dog's fur strapped to him, and a vicious looking dagger lying in the widening pool of blood. The mystery was solved.

The Battle

He stood there on the hill, proudly surveying his domain. Below him the herd, of which he was both master and father, grazed peacefully.

He was big for a mustang—at least seventeen hands. His long slim legs spoke of speed, while his great chest and barrel told of the endurance, strength, and power which had aided him well in his fight for leadership of the band. His dish face proclaimed his descent from the Arab ponies brought over by the Spaniards in their conquest of South America. He was completely black in colour. His long flowing tail reached to his fetlocks, and his mane was tangle-free and blowing in the wind. Standing there in the sunlight, alert and yet relaxed, he had the appearance of a living statue—something carved from pure black marble and mysteriously given life.

Suddenly his nostrils flared and he turned slightly to the east. Approaching the herd was a stallion that might have come from exactly the same mold as the black. The only difference was the colour—a bright flashing red, which shone like copper where the sun hit it. The black poised there for a moment, and then, with a scream of challenge, hurled himself down the hill at his opponent.

Shrieking defiance with every move of their graceful bodies, the stallions closed in a fight to the death. In some way they both sensed that this battle would effect their destinies. Often before their paths had crossed, but until this day combat had been avoided. To the victor would go the spoils—two of the finest wild horse herds ever seen in that region. The loser would become an outcast, a rogue whose very life would be forfeit if found in his rival's territory another day.

Savagely they met. Teeth bared, they rose smoothly on their hind legs, striking with their forefeet as they came together. With the grace of dancers they clashed and moved back again and again, neither gaining an advantage over the other. For three-quarters of an hour the fight raged on, without either stallion being hurt seriously. Finally, exhausted, they drew apart for a few moments' rest. Flanks heaving, heads hanging tiredly, the two no longer resembled the implacable enemies of instants earlier. Blood dripped slowly from the black's neck and shoulders, while the other's coat was now streaked with slashes of scarlet.

Minutes passed slowly. Suddenly, without warning, the black threw himself at his rival and the screams of fighting stallions filled the air once more.

Crouched on the grass of the prairie, Timmy sighed wistfully. "If only they were real," he said, looking down at the two plastic horses on the ground.

Maroons—1959

With the opening of another high-school rugby season, the Daniel MacIntyre Maroons practised hard because their goal was the City Championship which the Maroons, unfortunately, had not captured for the last two years. The many weeks of practice preceding the rugby season were soon put to good use in the Red Feather Tournament. With the co-operation of the Cheerleaders and the DMCI supporters, the Maroons won their game 7-0. Paul Allan's winning touchdown helped Daniel amass a total of thirty-five points to win the Red Feather Shield for the second time in four years.

In the League's opening game, the Maroons downed the determined St. Paul's team 34-12. The steady defensive and offensive performance was highlighted by a seventy-two yard run by Henry Schroeder and a sixty-seven yard pass and run by Dale Helgason.

The second game, against Sisler High, turned out to be a gritty defensive battle. Both defences stood their ground until Daniel Mac exploded for two touchdowns. The first was scored by Skuli Sigfusson on a twenty-seven yard pass, and the second on a twenty-yard run by Paul Allan after a pass interception. This determined effort, which won the game for Daniel 14-0, was carried on into the next game.

The next encounter, against the Kelvin Klippers proved to many critics that the Danielites are still the "mighty" Maroons. Kelvin was attempting to break a losing streak in which they had not beaten Daniel Mac in a number of years. With a minute and twenty seconds to go, the Klippers held a 9-0 lead. Suddenly Dale Helgason broke off tackle for a forty-five yard touchdown run. Paul Allan converted, making the score 9-7 for Kelvin. In the ensuing plays, Daniel tied the score when Victor Swiatkiewicz tackled the Kelvin ball carrier behind the goal for two points. The score was nine-all with twenty seconds remaining. On Kelvin's next play, Bob Simmonds broke through the Kelvin line to recover a loose ball. Gary Grubert kicked well in the last play of the game to give the Maroons a point and a hard-fought 10-9 win.

The game against St. John's Tech was a complete rout as the Maroon offensive unit crushed the St. John's defences. Angus MacIver scampered for two touchdowns, Paul Allan, Ray Miller, and Henry Schroeder's ninety-two yard run contributed the other touchdowns. Gary Grubert was a defensive standout with two intercepted passes, and his kicking performance was an outstanding feature of the game.

The game that all Danielites had been awaiting approached. The team was determined to beat Tec-Voc who the previous year had given Daniel a 40-1 trouncing. This determination was apparent when Ray Miller returned the ball to the opposition forty-yard line on the opening kick-off. Ten plays later Paul Allan scored from twenty-five yards out. Paul missed the convert but provided the rest of Daniel's scoring punch when he intercepted a pass and ran twenty yards for a touchdown. The team's tremendous desire was again exhibited by Angus MacIver, who, when a Tec-Voc player had recovered a fumble and headed for the Daniel goal line with a twenty yard lead, closed the gap, and after a ninety yard chase tackled the ball carrier on the three yard line. Though Tec-Voc scored a touchdown after this play, the enthusiastic Maroons scored a 12-6 triumph.

The Gordon Bell game provided Daniel Mac with many scoring opportunities but many of these passed unused. The Daniel defence allowed only a sixty-seven yard pass and run play and a single point. This, however, was enough to let Gordon Bell win the last league game 8-0.

In the semi-finals, the Maroons were matched against Kelvin. The Maroons showed that their first victory was not an accident by completely demolishing the Kelvin team by a score of 30-0. The Maroon defensive unit held the Kelvinite offense to a standstill. Henry Schroeder scored the first touchdown with Dale Helgason contributing two more T.D.'s. The other points came from a fumble, recovered in the Kelvin end zone by Victor Swiatkiewicz, and a field goal, two converts, and a single point supplied by the tremendous kicking of Gary Grubert.

In the final game, the swift-striking Gordon Bell Panthers scored fourteen points in the first quarter. The Danielites then settled down and helped MacIver score a touchdown in the second quarter. In the third quarter, Paul Allan's fifty-five yard run set up a touchdown by Dale Helgason. From this point the Maroons seemed prepared to take the lead but lost their real chance when, in spite of having a favorable wind, they failed to hold Gordon Bell on their own five yard line with ten minutes left. When the Danielites finally recovered the ball, the lack of time and their own anxiety proved to be their downfall. Daniel MacIntyre went down to a 15-13 defeat though many thought in the last few minutes that the game could have gone either way.

Despite the loss of the hard-fought championship game, the players congratulated the Gordon Bell winners in their dressing room.

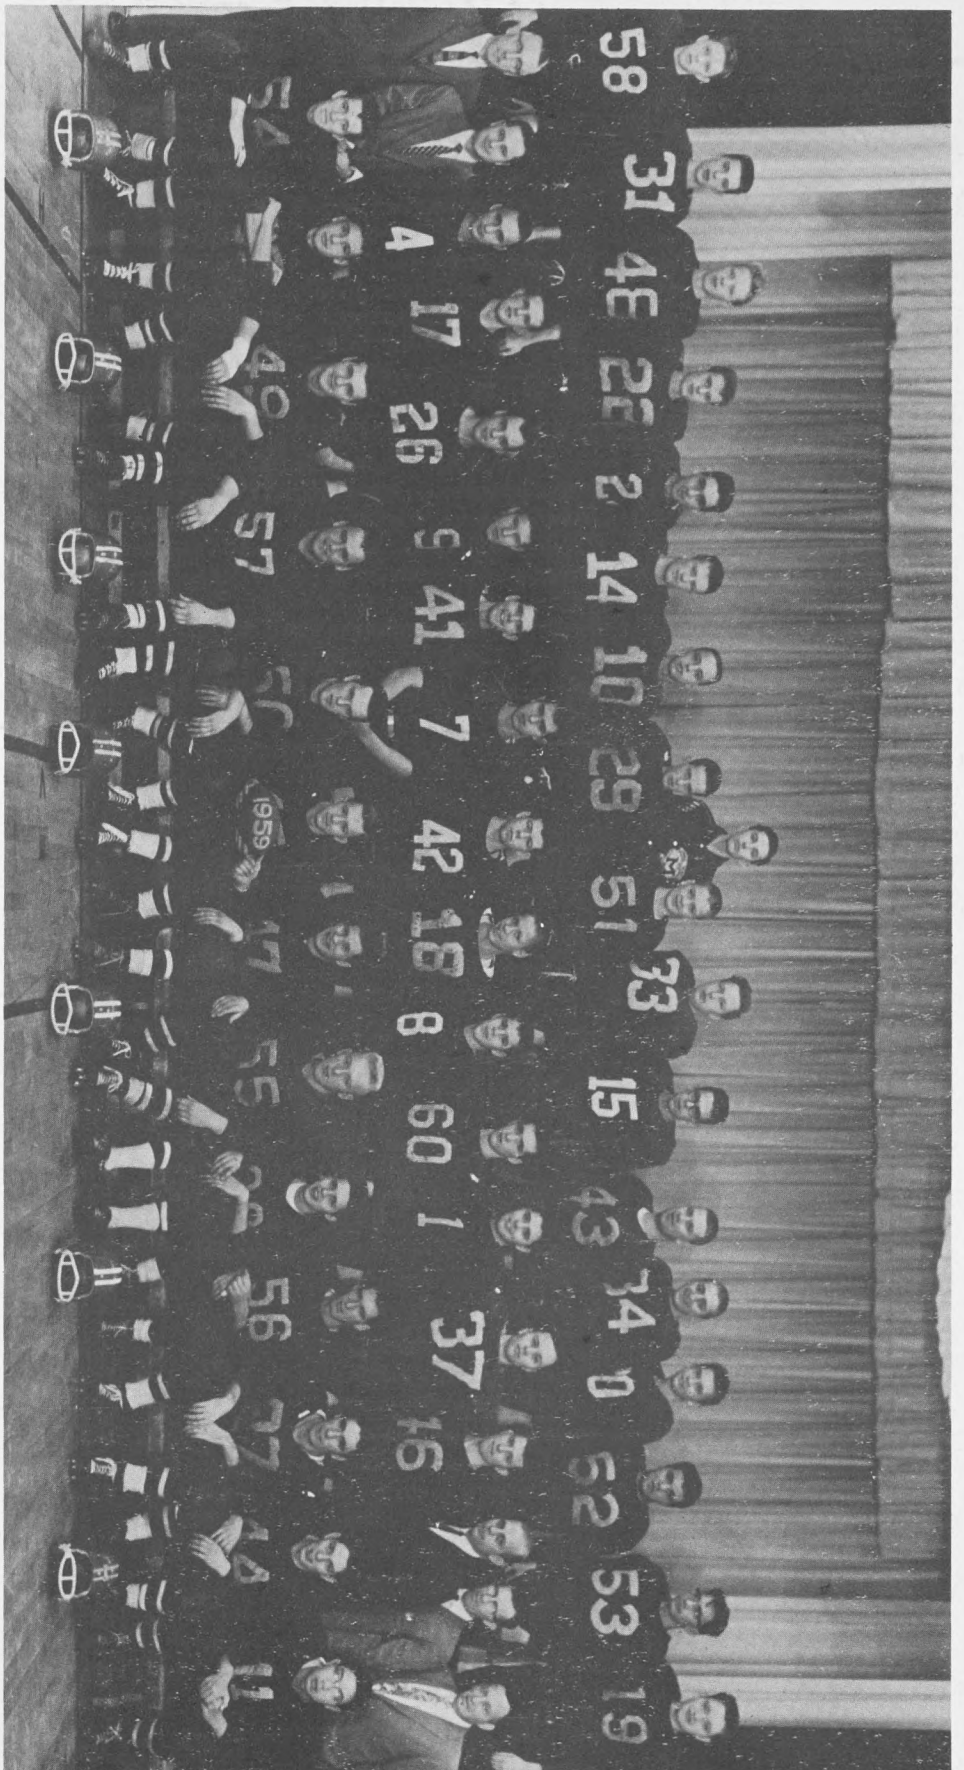

This year the city coaches and selectors once again noticed the top quality of the Maroon players. Selected by the judges for the All-Star Team were Paul Allan, linebacker; Angus McIver, quarterback; Dave Holden, center; Henry Schroeder, halfback; Bob McWilliams made both offensive and defensive tackle spots while Victor Swiatkiewicz made offensive guard and defensive middle guard positions.

The rugby team would like to thank the team's coach Mr. Potter, line coaches, Mr. Edwards and Ron Rentz, trainer Mr. Smith, manager Mr. Nicol, and equipment managers David Challes, Ted Crawford, and Jim Petrie. Thanks also to all those who have supported the team with their time, energy, and patience.

All of the players, especially those who must leave Daniel MacIntyre this year, wish to express their thanks for the wonderful chance to play football at Daniel MacIntyre.

Seniors - City Champs

The Seniors won all their games and became city champions by defeating Churchill High School in the play-off.

A fine team spirit, combined with a will-to-win, and a little luck enabled them to score more goals than their opponents did. The defence, however, outshone the forwards as they lost only two goals during the season.

The team wishes to thank Mr. McLeod for a coaching job well done.

Juniors

A promising Junior team, led by Reinhard Loy, and under the careful guidance of Mr. Harvey, turned out faithfully to all the practices. For us, as for all Winnipeg soccer teams, the toughest opposition last fall was the cold, wet weather.

The first game against Tec-Voc ended in a 2-2 tie. The second game, against St. John's, was played at Daniel. Though the weather had improved slightly, the score was worse because the game ended 3 to 1 in favour of the Saints. After that we watched the weather anxiously and hopefully, but we never played the third and final game—the one that was to end in glorious victory for Daniel's Junior team in the Division.

Inter-High Basketball

Freshman

Coached by Mr. McIntyre, the D.M.C.I. Freshmen Basketball team won all their league games.

In the semi-finals, the Freshmen team sidelined Kelvin by scores of 47-30, and 37-33. Daniel then took the best of three finals in two straight games by defeating Tec-Voc 46-31, and 37-34.

Danny McMillan was selected for the All-Star team.

The Freshmen team wishes to thank all those who helped make their season a successful one.

Back Row: Larry Chapman, Cliff Edwards, Ian Puchlik, Mr. McIntyre (Coach), Jim Cox, Bob Burfoot, Ron Stevenson.

Varsity

This year Mr. Murray coached a determined Varsity team in a fourteen game schedule which concluded in seven wins and seven losses.

The season started discouragingly with two losses, the first against Sisler, the second against Gordon Bell. Our team then came back to win the next three games, defeating Churchill, St. John's, and Elmwood. Tec-Voc broke this winning streak, but Daniel recovered to score its fourth victory against Kelvin.

In the second half of the schedule Daniel started off with a win against Gordon Bell. The next game, however, was a defeat at the hands of the powerful St. John's team. Churchill again lost to our team, but, an improved Kelvin team, defeated our boys. Daniel then beat Elmwood, but again went down to defeat in games against Tec-Voc and Sisler.

Our thanks to Mr. Murray for his fine coaching and encouragement, and to the cheerleaders who made our losses easier to take.

Boys' Inter-Room Basketball Champs

Back Row: Earl Allen, Bob Mackie.

Over thirty teams in nine divisions played inter-room basketball this year. The grade champions were: Grade XII—Room 4, Grade XI—Room 21, and Grade X—Room 42.

In a two game total point semi-final, Room 21, defeated Room 4, and Room 42 defeated Room 21. In the finals Room 21 downed Room 42, 72-10 in a two game total point series.

Many thanks to Mr. Murray, Mr. Potter, and the referees.

Cross Country

Richard Shand, Ron Robson, Gary Cromack, Gary Stagg, Werner Roller.

Although Daniel Mac's cross country team did not win a city championship, it always performed well. During the year the team ran at the Normal School in October, at the Daniel—Kelvin football game, at the First International Track Meet in the Winnipeg Arena, and also at the Second International Track Meet in March. A few of the boys are running from two to five miles per day to keep in condition for Field Day.

Intra Mural Curling

Erroll Jonasson (lead), Alf Ramsay (skip), Arthur Cope (third).

Missing: Bill Martin (second).

Under the supervision of Mr. Fallis, the school curlers enjoyed another good year.

Alf Ramsey's rink took the first half of the eighteen game series, and then went on to win the second half and the championship.

Daniel McIntyre had several teams in the High School Bonspiel, but not any of the teams won a major honour.

Speedskating

Daniel McIntyre was well represented in the Winnipeg Schools' Speedskating Meet this year. The Daniel boys skated well to place first and third in the finals. In the final for the Senior Girls' crown, Daniel's girls were forced to settle for third and fourth positions. John McKenzie captured the Senior High Individual Championship.

When the points were totalled, Daniel was in second place. Thanks to Mr. Linton for his fine coaching.

Co-ed Volleyball

Front Row: Lynne Ramsay, Randy Wong, Pat Moore.

Co-ed Volleyball enjoyed another good season this year. There were approximately fifty teams who participated in a "double-knockout" tournament. The majority of the games were played at 11:30 and 12:00, as the early morning turnout was poor. The Knickerbockers and the Sooners met in a two game total point final. The Knicks won both games to remain undefeated and became Co-ed Champs.

The All-Stars

Front Row: Victor Swiatkiewicz, Dave Holden, Bob McWilliams.

Daniel Mac football talent was recognized this year when six Maroons were chosen for the All-Star squad. On the offensive team are Dave Holden, center; Vic Swiatkiewicz, guard; Bob McWilliams, tackle; Angus McIver, quarterback; and Henry Schroeder, back. Vic Swiatkiewicz and Bob McWilliams also gained places on the defensive team as guard and tackle respectively. Good show, boys!

Swimming

Back: Jim Humphreys, Bruno Rizzo, John McKenzie, Bud Bagui.

Front: Barbara Duncan, Janice Shepp, Jill Grant.

This year some sixty Daniel students formed a swimming club which met every Tuesday night at the Sherbrook Pool. It is hoped that the club will grow next year.

A swimming team from Daniel again took top honors in the Manitoba championship for high schools. The members of this victorious team were: Jill Grant, Janice Shepp, Bud Bagui, and John MacKenzie.

The Joe Werbenuk Trophy

Gary Grubert

This year Gary Grubert was chosen as the winner of the Joe Werbenuk Trophy, awarded annually to the outstanding male athlete in Grade XI.

A high calibre athlete, Gary was active in many school sports. He played Freshman Basketball in Grade X, and this year he played Varsity Basketball. He also played Co-Ed Volleyball in Grade X and this year captained his team to the Championship. Gary displayed his rugby talent as a member of the Maroons and both this year and last represented Daniel in the shuttle races at the Inter-High Field Day.

The staff and students alike will welcome the choice of Gary, as he truly is a deserving recipient of this award.

Seniors

The Senior Girls' Volleyball Team was victorious in four of their eight games. They tied one and lost three. In their first game, they fought to a 41-41 tie against Churchill. Elmwood beat them in their second game by a close score of 35-31. They were easily victorious in the next game, defeating Sisler 53-28, but were badly beaten by Kelvin 55-28. Daniel trounced the newly formed Grant Park School by a score of 65-20. The girls were again triumphant against Gordon Bell and St. John's, beating them 46-25 and 55-35 respectively. Daniel lost their last game to Tec-Voc by a score of 37-25. The girls did not make the finals, but enjoyed playing and gaining valuable experience.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank Miss Kanchier for her fine coaching throughout the year.

Juniors - City Champs

This year the Junior team did extremely well in their league games. They defeated Churchill 58-25, Sisler 48-30, Grant Park 20-16, Kelvin 42-35, Gordon Bell 46-25. Tec-Voc defeated Daniel 44-42, but Daniel recovered from their first and only defeat to win their last game against St. John's by a score of 67-28. This win qualified them for the finals which were played against Tec-Voc. In the semi-finals Daniel proved the better team by defeating the Tec-Voc team by a score of 56-30. Daniel played the final championship game at Weston School against Tec-Voc. The overwhelming score of 54-27 gave the Junior team the City Championship.

We would like to thank Miss Kanchier for her excellent coaching.

Seniors

The Senior Girls Basketball Team won three games, tied one, and lost two this season. The first game Daniel lost to St. John's, but the game was disputed. We replayed the game and again lost, this time by a score of 18-13. We tied Churchill 18-18, defeated Kelvin 22-8 and Elmwood 24-17, in our following games. However, we met defeat against the powerful Gordon Bell team, which went on to win the championship. The score of this game was 24-18. In our final game we were triumphant over Tec-Voc, beating them 23-13. We were again defeated by Gordon Bell in a sudden death game which put us out of the playoffs.

On behalf of the whole team I would like to thank Fred Slemko and Paul Allen, who devoted much of their time to coach us.

Juniors - City Champs

This year was a very prosperous one for the junior girls. The team got off to a good start by winning their first six games. These wins were all well deserved. These victories were against Sisler, St. Johns, Elmwood, Churchill, Gordon Bell, and Grant Park. The scores were 28-7, 16-5, 21-2, 29-4, 20-4, and 19-10 respectively. The girls fought hard in their seventh regular league game, against Kelvin only to lose by a score of 15-13. However, in the final game, the team returned to their winning ways in defeating Tec-Voc 16-12.

In a thrilling sudden death final against Kelvin the girl's won a hard fought overtime contest, by a score of 14-11, and with this victory the city championship.

The team would like to thank Miss Kanchier for making this championship possible.

Lynne Taylor, Chiyeko Suga, Evelyn Bond, Gloria Puttaert, Gladys Maringer, Darlene McNeill.

This year was a successful one for inter-room volleyball. In a two-division league, Room 11 triumphed in both divisions, "A" and "B." These two teams then met in the championship game in which the "A" team defeated the "B" team to reign as "Champs."

Thanks go to Miss Kanchier for arranging the schedule and to the referees for giving up their time.

Back: Tamara Morowski, Pat Anderson, Marian Fawcett, Carol Aldous, Janice Shepp.

Front: Olga Peleshok, Gloria Stewart, Norma Simpson, Ella Cook, Diane Storey.

This year, the girls from Room 55 went through the series undefeated. The final game was by far the most exciting. At half time Room 55 led by 6 points, but Room 11 soon caught up. However, a final basket in the last minute gave Room 55 the championship by a score of 16-14.

The "A" team from Room 53 completed a schedule of six league games without a single defeat. In the sudden death final against Room 39, only two points separated the losers from the winners.

We wish to thank everyone who made this league possible.

Four successive wins against stiff opposition earned Room 53's "B" team a place in the finals. In the final game, for the school championship, we won against Room 39 by a score of 15-9.

Many thanks to Miss Kanchier for her help during the year.

Boys' Inter-High Volleyball

City Champs

Under Mr. Nemish's capable leadership, our boys won the inter-high volleyball championship.

In the first series Daniel beat St. John's in two consecutive games by identical scores of 15-10. In the next series against the favored Elmwood team, Daniel again won two games by identical scores; this time 15-9. We now entered the finals against Gordon Bell in a best-of-three series. The first game, which Daniel eventually won by a close 21-19 score, provided plenty of thrills. The second game, which Daniel won with an equally close score, gave the school the city championship.

Our many thanks to Mr. Nemish for the time and energy he expended in coaching the team.

Front Row: Chiyeko Suga, Ella Cook, Linda Hamerton, Margret Robinson, Pat Welsh.

Missing: Joan Misurak, Tom Ritson.

Boys: The great interest taken in our bowling league was evidence of the popularity of this sport. This year one hundred and twenty students, under the leadership of Ed Sorba and Irwin Redman, made up twenty teams.

The top bowler was Roy Fedak, with a 223 average. Bill West, Tom Ritson, and Ed Sorba succeeded in obtaining averages of 213, 203, and 201, respectively.

There was a five-pin increase this year in the boys' "high triple." Bob Boittiaux averaged 844. Bill Leetch and Bob captured the "high single" with a score of 350.

Girls: The girls proved their ability by winning the Manitoba High School Tournament, with a more than 100-point edge over the runner-up. Team members included Linda Hamerton, Judy Boychuk, Pat Welsh, Mary Ann Young, and Ella Cook.

Diane Pusey won the "high three" with a score of 834. A trophy was awarded to Roblin Johnson for her "high single" score of 322.

The girls concluded a successful season by winning the Provincial High School Bowling Championship.

Inter-High Field Day

The Inter-High Track and Field Meet for 1960 was held at Sargent Park on May 24, and at the Stadium on May 25. Daniel's boys placed sixth with a total of 105 points, and the girls were third with a total of 97.33. Our success was made possible by the following athletes:

BOYS:

PRIMARY—Half Mile: Gary Cromack, 2; Hop, Step, and Jump: Rheinhard Loy, 2; 220 Yards: Ron Robson, 2,

JUNIOR—Half Mile: Rick Shand, 2; Broad Jump: Gary Pinkos, 1; Bill Deeley, 3; Shot Put: Klaus Lindeman, 3.

INTERMEDIATE—Shot Put: Danny Lenoski, 2; 100 Yards: Sid Filmore, 2; 220 Yards: Sid Filmore, 2.

SENIOR — Shot Put: Skuli Sigfusson, 1; 220 Yards: Lutz Hammoser, 3.

440 PURSUIT RELAY—Primary, 3; Intermediate, 1; Senior, 3.

SHUTTLES — Primary, 3; Intermediate, 1.

GIRLS:

PRIMARY — Individual Hurdles: Heather Morrison, 2; 60 Yards: Heather Morrison, 1; 75 Yards: Diane Suncan, 3.

JUNIOR — High Jump: Elaine Nind, 2; Individual Hurdles: Gloria Puttaert, 2; 60 Yards: Elaine McElheran, 1; 75 Yards: Gloria Puttaert, 2.

INTERMEDIATE — High Jump: Evelyn Bond, 2; Ball Throw: Zdenka Princic, 3.

SENIOR — 60 Yards: Norma Simpson, 1.

HURDLES — Intermediate, 2; Senior, 1.

SHUTTLES — Primary, 2; Junior, 1; Intermediate, 2; Senior, 2.

Cheerleaders

This year the cheerleaders elected a captain—Olga Peleshok. Olga's able leadership was important in the cheerleaders' winning second place in the Red Feather competition. This victory considerably helped Daniel in winning the Red Feather Championship.

The girls started practising early in September in order to be ready for the football season. During this season they never missed a game—despite much unpleasant weather.

After the Christmas holidays the cheerleaders again practised for the basketball season. Another attraction was added to the team; the shaggy dog mascot called "George." The girls missed only one basketball game, through no fault of their own.

The cheerleaders have worked very hard this year and have tried to live up to Daniel's high standards. It is hoped that the Daniel McIntyre students will continue to appreciate and to support our fine cheerleaders even more next year than they did this year.

Val Anderson

Back Row: Carol Pinkos, Lenore Farley, Elaine Nind, Olga Peleshok, Val Anderson, Cathy Kowpak, Norma McKinnon.

Traditions that live

Strong and honourable traditions provide the foundation of firm training in leadership expressed today in the motto of the three Canadian Services Colleges: Truth-Duty-Valour.

Allied to the prestige of the past is a university degree education given by these colleges to the officer-cadets of Canada's armed forces. Carefully selected high school graduates are trained for challenging professional careers as officers in the Navy, Army or Air force, for the responsibility of holding the Queen's Commission.

to serve the Future

Through the Regular Officer Training Plan (ROTP) the Department of National Defence will sponsor a limited number of qualified high school graduates to obtain a university degree education, either at the Canadian Services Colleges or at designated Canadian universities. Full details of this sponsored education can be obtained without obligation from your nearest Armed Forces Recruiting Centre, or by mailing this coupon now.

'Closing date for candidates applying for 1960 fall classes is 1 July 1960'.
